NAZI RAIDER SHOT DOWN

LONDON, Nov. 29 (INS)—One German war plane was shot down in the North Sea off the Northumberland coast today and another put to flight by British fighters in a sudden burst of aerial activity over Scotland.

Soon after the first machine crashed into the sea with loss of its entire crew, another German Heinkel bomber appeared over a southwestern Scottish town. Planes of the Royal Air Force swept aloft, and soon the sound of heavy machine-gun fire was heard. The German machine sped away in a southerly direction, hotly pursued by the Britons. A third plane was sighted flying over another Scottish town at an altitude of only 1000 feet.

REPORT RED ARMY MARCHES ON FINNS

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 29 (INS)—Greeted by cheers of "crush the Finnish war-mongers" from the population, streams of Soviet Russian troops moved toward the Finnish frontier today, according to reports from Leningrad.

Reports in Stockholm indicated the Russians plan almost immediate seizure of the unfortified islands of Hogland, Seitskaer and Tytskaer in the Gulf of Finland, then perhaps pressing toward the Karelian Isthmus in an invasion of the Finnish mainland.

This thrust into Finland, the report said, is contemplated from an Estonian Baltic port, now occupied by Soviet troops.

FINN REPLY GIVEN REDS IN CRISIS

Secret Note Denies Army Massed to Fight Russia

By WALTER SCHWARTZ
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HELSINKI, Nov. 29—Finland's reply to the latest Soviet note denouncing the Russo-Finnish non-aggression pact was dispatched to Moscow today for presentation to Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov.

At the same time, reports published abroad that general mobilization had been ordered in Finland were denied officially. On the contrary, it was stated that a number of reservists have been released from service.

Finnish border patrols were ordered to withdraw "some distance" from the Soviet-Finnish frontier as the Finnish government sought to reach peaceful settlement of its crisis with the U. S. S. R.

Instructions to the troops to retire were issued following receipt of rumors that the Moscow government might send an ultimatum to Helsinki demanding that the Finnish forces be withdrawn.

"VIOLATION OF LAW"

Finland's reply to the latest note from Moscow has not been made public, and there were varying versions of its content.

It was learned on reliable authority, however, the note takes sharp issue with Russia's action in denouncing the non-aggression pact, pointing out that the agreement contains no clause permitting abrogation before 1945.

The Russian action therefore is characterized as a "violation of international law."

Firm conviction that a peaceful settlement of the crisis would eventually be reached was expressed by United States Ambassador to Moscow, Laurence A. Steinhardt today.

Steinhardt, who arrived in Helsinki from Moscow yesterday, based his statement upon the opinion of military experts who believe that a "winter war" by Russia against Finland would be a doubtful issue at best.

Later in the day, Ambassador Steinhardt suddenly changed his plans and engaged a special plane to fly him to Riga enroute to Moscow. He had planned to remain here until Friday.

(Copenhagen received a dispatch from Moscow today stating that, according to circles close to the Kremlin, the Soviet government planned to deliver an ultimatum to Finland, demanding that Finnish troops be withdrawn 16 miles

Reds Get Ready For Balkan Move

LONDON, Nov. 29 (INS)—Soviet Russia is anxious to settle the Russo-Finnish question speedily as important developments are expected in the Balkans, a Reuter (British) news agency dispatch from Helsinki said today.

Warships, Planes In Battle

OSLO, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Norwegian admiralty reported today a battle was in progress off the west coast, just outside territorial waters, between warships and bombing planes.

Word of the battle was relayed to the admiralty by a Coast Guard station at Stadt, from which the fighting could be seen.

A station south of Stadt reported heavy gunfire in the engagement which began about 10:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m., Boston time). No hits were observed from the shore.

90 Planes Raid Chinese Areas

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 29 (INS)—Mass air raids in which 90 Japanese bombing planes participated today showered destruction on cities in Kansu, Shensi and Honan provinces, according to Chinese sources.

LATEST war scare in Europe was located on the Finnish-Russian border today, after numerous clashes between troops which face each other across the line. Slightest overt move may start conflict.

War Diary

88th Day

Russian reports of fresh border clashes today brought the crisis between Finland and Russia nearer the boiling point.

Given a grave turn by Russia's scrapping of the Finnish-Soviet non-aggression treaty, the threatening situation overshadowed developments in the bitter sea and air warfare between Germany and the Allies.

The Norwegian admiralty reported a naval battle between warships and bombing planes just outside Norway's territorial waters, but detatils were meagre.

Britain reported a German raider had been shot down off the Northumberland coast. Another British freighter hit a mine and sank.

The Finnish government, meeting in the partly blacked out capital last night and again today, framed a reply to the newest Soviet communication which renounced the Soviet-Finnish treaty of 1932 pledging the two powers to refrain from aggression against one another.

Additional tension arose from Russian accusations that Finnish troops fired across the frontier on Soviet troops and that numerous isolated clashes occurred along the border.

Finland flatly denied Soviet charges.

Moscow observers said Russia had about 1,000,000 men in garrisons facing Finland. More than 400,000 Finns are under arms.

Pope Plans New Move For Peace

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 29 (INS)—Pope Pius XII is expected to launch a new effort to bring about world peace on December 15, it was disclosed by Vatican circles.

Papal pronouncements of the highest importance in political and diplomatic circles may be expected on that date, when Dino Alfieri, newly appointed Italian ambassador to the Holy See, presents his credentials, these circles stated.

Alfieri's address, it was understood, will be of great importance in establishing Italy's possible role as a liaison agent for peace between the belligerents and the Vatican.

The new ambasador was formerly Italian minister of popular culture, and headed a branch of the government that was extremely friendly to Germany. He was made ambassador to the Holy See in the recent shake-up in which Benito Mussolini made wide changes in his cabinet.

Alfieri, it was understood, was named to the Holy See for the express purpose of affording an informal means of co-ordinating peace efforts through the Vatican.

Pope Pius, it was believed, in his reply to Alfieri, will disclose the methods he hopes to follow in bringing about a peaceful settlement of the European conflict.

Lynn Wife Kidnaped, Beaten, Names Man

Near collapse with a broken nose, cut and bruised lips, both eyes blacked and other marks of a brutal beating, a young Lynn wife today accused a South End man of kidnaping her in a taxicab after alighting from a Boston bus in Haymarket sq.

Her assailant slugged her into unconsciousness, attempted to attack her and finally abandoned her in Tremont st., South End, stripped of her hat, fur coat and gloves, the victim charged

She is Mrs. Arlene Holmes, 27, of Archer st., Lynn.

She appeared today in municipal court against Karl Hopkins, 22, of Carver st., South End.

HIS STORY DIFFERENT

Hopkins was arrested by Police Sergt. Francis H. McGeever and was booked on charges of kidnaping, assault and battery with intent to commit an attack and assault and battery.

Judge John Duff held him in $5000.

Police said they found Mrs. Holmes' hat, coat and gloves in Hopkins' room.

The accused youth allegedly told arresting officers:

"The girl came willingly to my room. We came together in a taxicab.

"Later she got hysterical, and I tried to quiet her. I threw my arms around her, and she struggled, and I guess she got banged up some in the rumpus."

SOBS OUT HER STORY

According to police, Hopkins is a native of Lee and has a court record for larceny. They said he has been on probation.

Mrs. Holmes' story was first sobbed out to police after she had staggered into a Tremont st., South End, spa, in a hysterical condition.

At her request, police were called and she was taken to the Warren ave. station.

There she received medical attention, after which she told Sergt. McGeever:

"DRAGGED INTO CAR"

"I was on my way from Lynn to the Hotel Brunswick, Back Bay, where my husband works.

"I got off the Lynn bus at Haymarket sq., and started to walk to the subway entrance.

"All of a sudden, an auto pulled up beside me and a man in the back seat reached out and pulled me inside. When I struggled, he kept hitting me.

"He punched and slugged me and finally I must have fainted or something. Next thing I knew I was on the street somewhere, without my hat, coat and gloves."

FACE IS DISFIGURED

First court appearance of Mrs. Holmes today was when she appeared with Sergt. McGeever to swear out the complaints against Hopkins.

The warrants were issued by Judge Frank W. Tomasello.

Houkins' arrest followed immediately, and he was taken before Judge Duff.

Mrs. Holmes was disfigured by the beating. She was ill and weak in court and was treated by Dr. Edward Sandoz.

MRS. MILDRED SULLIVAN AND HER 'LITTLE BOY BLUE'

Search Records For Kin Clue To 'Boy Blue'

A search of City Hospital records was started today as officials attempted to gain more information concerning the parents and other relatives of "Little Boy Blue," three-weeks-old infant.

Prints of his tiny feet matched those taken November 10, of a child born at the hospital to Mrs. Mildred Sullivan, 21, of Boston.

Social service workers today delved into the files, hoping to learn more of the young mother's whereabouts, her former address, or possibly of other occasions when she may have been a hospital patient.

Mrs. Wilhelmina MacFarlane

When the baby arrived at the hospital Sunday night, via the Warren ave. police, his mother's name was thought to be "Mildred Manning." Such was the name she allegedly gave Mrs. Wilhelmina MacFarlane, Shawmut ave. lodging house keeper, when she left "Little Boy Blue" in the landlady's care.

Hospital records also revealed that the young mother was once known as Mildred Fitzpatrick, her maiden name. Her home town was listed as Indian Orchard, near Springfield.

According to police, the girl claimed her husband was a milkman at the time she entrusted her baby to Mrs. MacFarlane. She has lived at several South End addresses, authorities say.

Meanwhile, "Little Boy Blue," happily unconscious of all the excitement, is "thriving," nurses said.

Walpole Boy Offers His Blood to 2

Mindful still of the itching torture he suffered from pemphigus, rare and most deadly of human skin diseases, nine-year-old George Allen of Walpole today offered his blood to save the lives of a Philadelphia man and woman now dying of that scourge.

George, who lives with his family in Main st., Walpole, shakes his head now when he remembers the 10 months he spent in a hospital at the age of five, given up for dead.

He is one of the few persons in the United States who ever recovered from the malady, and when he heard a radio appeal for blood donors for the Philadelphia victims he replied immediately.

Doctors said there was no hope for the dying couple unless a transfusion from a person who had recovered from the sickness could be obtained.

"I'll go," George told his mother and father.

Today he explained how doctors told him the disease is a strange ailment that develops in one of 1000 acute skin diseases. Great multiple blisters, filled with pus, form all over the patient's body, even on the tongue and around the eyes, burning and itching.

"It almost drives you crazy," George said.

"His weight went down till he was nothing but skin and bones," his mother said.

George's father, Walter, is employed by the Walpole park department. The boy has three brothers and one sister.

High Aides May Quit Jobs in Dowd Expose

"High jinks" and conduct of affairs at Charles st. jail during the last 13 months will lead to the resignation of at least one, probably more, of the aides of ex-Sheriff John F. Dowd, it was learned today.

Dist. Atty. William J. Foley is awaiting the withdrawal of one official, following startling new evidence given by an unnamed witness.

Asked to comment on the matter, Sheriff Frederick R. Sullivan declared he had made a complete survey of conditions but had not taken the initiative in the matter of replacing Dowd aides.

He said he preferred to allow the district attorney complete freedom in any action he might wish to take.

On a tip that Dowd was to meet two prominent attorneys at the Copley-Plaza Hotel to arrange preparation of his defense, 10 officers were speeded from police headquarters today.

Meanwhile, strong hopes of finding the fleeing ex-sheriff lay in a New York search conducted by picked Boston police.

$22,360 Given For Fatal B. & M. Crash

Verdicts totalling $22,360.50 against the Boston & Maine R. R. for negligence were returned today by a Suffolk Superior Court jury in connection with the deaths of a Woburn mother, her son and injury to two other children at a Doffstown, N. H., grade crossing.

A verdict of $12,165 was awarded Einar Peterson of Woburn for the death of his wife, Ruth, 32; $8445.50 for the death of his son, Edward, seven, and $1750 for injuries suffered by his daughters Nancy, 14, and Ann, seven.

The accident occurred July 27, 1935, near Manchester, N .H., where Peterson's car was struck by a Boston-bound train.

The verdicts were handed down under the New Hampshire law which provides maximum damages according to one's income. Peterson is a shoemaker.

The jury held that the railroad provided a bell and ample warning signs at the crossing, the train was traveling at an excessive rate speed as it approached the crossing.

STATE BIG LOSER IN TAX BALANCING

Massachusetts cities and towns received $15,304,798.72 more from the State in distribution of tax receipts during 1939 than the State took from the 355 municipalities, Henry F. Long, tax commissioner, announced today.

Boston was charged $4,308,815,98 for state taxes and received $6,413,-816.85 as its share of income, gasoline, corporation and other state tax collections. The largest state receipts came from the income tax, $15,950,067.68. The next largest was the gasoline tax which totaled $9,600,000.

ASKS U. S. TO PROBE 'TAPPING'

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Nov. 29—"Immediate and rigid" federal investigation of alleged tapping of his home telephone wire was demanded today by Mayor Thomas P. McCoy.

In a letter to U. S. Sen. Theodore F. Green, former governor of Rhode Island, the mayor asked that the wire tapping "plot" be called to attention of the Federal Communications Commission.

FORMER G-MAN HUNTED

Unlawful interference with his telephone line, used "by a public official in the conduct of public business," was a violation of the federal statute, Mayor McCoy contended in his letter.

Soon after mailing the letter, the mayor accompanied U. S. Atty. J. Howard McGrath and local police officials to the home of Edward L. Freeman, where the wire tapping of the mayor's phone allegedly had its listening terminus.

Freeman was out on bail today, after having been arrested and held as an accessory in the tapping.

Named by Freeman as principal in the wire plot and sought throughout New England was Lee E. Barton, former G-man.

POLED BIG VOTE

He posed in Pawtucket as an "investigator," and it was supposed he was in the city in furtherance of the probe of Pawtucket's financial affairs being conducted by the Republican state administration.

Mayor McCoy, a Democrat, turned out one of the few big Democratic votes in his district in the last gubernatorial election, elsewhere a Republican landslide.

A series of investigations followed.

Freeman, a wealthy Republican, who is said to hold state printing contracts, named Barton after a 12-hour grilling by police. He said Barton had come to his home, recommended by Harold Shippee, an insurance broker, several weeks ago and rented a room at $20 a week.

Judge William Connell, who greeted Freeman on his arraignment with "Hello, Ed," with the response of "Hello, Bill," set Dec. 14 for trial of the charges. Police said they found a radio set converted into a loud-speaker recording device in a bedroom. Freeman was held $2000 bail, which he supplied.

P. O. TO HOLD AUCTION

Announcement was made by Postmaster Peter F. Tague today that an auction of parcels lost or unclaimed in the mails will be held next Thursday on the second floor of the postal annex at South Station. A total of 380 lots of miscellaneous articles will be offered.

'Doodles' Hunt Buried Treasure in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 29 (AP)—Dipping "doodles" spurred diggers today in their search for the legendary treasure of the Hollywood hills—$200,000 in gold and gems which a Mexican sheepherder supposedly buried 74 years ago.

A hole in fame Hollywood Bowl's parking lot reached a depth of 12 feet and Frank Hoekstra, inventor of the No. 1 "doodlebug" on the job said gold "definitely" was somewhere below.

Four other "doodlebug" operators appeared on the scene, and three of them agreed after tests that metal is present. The other's apparatus remained indifferent.

USE ELECTRIC DEVICE

Hoekstra calls his machine an "electrochemical recorder." It shoots 800 volts of battery-supplied electrical current into the ground, he says.

When the charge strikes buried metal it sets up a secondary field of impulses which are reflected to a sensitive electrode filled with copper sulphate and relayed to a recording needle which agitates according to the current received.

The other "doodlebugs" were roughly similar to Hoekstra's except one. This consisted of a mysterious substance wrapped in gray cloth and exhibited by an elderly, dreamy-eyed gentleman with a cane.

He said it achieved its devining powers from the ether.

GOLD HOLDS 'CURSE'

Henry Jones, Seattle mining engineer in charge of the search, remained confident he would find the cache which, so the story goes, was buried in 1865 after unsuccessful attempts to buy arms in San Francisco to aid a Mexican revolution.

The legend says eight men who sought the treasure have been killed by a "curse" placed by Benito Juarez, who gathered the fortune to aid his cause.

Divorcee Dies In 17-Story Fall

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (AP)—Mrs. Adeline Tate, 38, a Riverside Drive divorcee, fell to death today from the 17th floor apartment in Christopher st., Greenwich Village.

The apartment is leased by Age Skiolvig, a chemical engineer, who told detectives Mrs. Tate was formerly renting agent for the building and had let herself into his apartment last Saturday with a passkey while he was away on business.

The detectives said Skiolvig, upon learning that Mrs. Tate had run up a bill of about $100 on his telephone, trying to reach him in cities, telephoned the apartment house superintendent to eject her.

When he returned today she was still in the apartment. Skiolvig said he reprimanded her and that she went into the bathroom. When he heard an ashtray fall he opened the door and found she had fallen through the window.

Mob Cleveland Food Stations

CLEVELAND, Nov. 29 (AP)—Cleveland unemployed crowded relief stations again today, demanding food and coal in the face of a financial stringency, which has forced the city to curtail benefits.

Rides 12 in His Car; Fined $5

A scene oft pictured in the comic strips greeted Patrolman William H. Dowling today as he patrolled his beat near Newton High school.

He rubbed his eyes just to be sure and then summoned William W. Hoblitzell, III, the 17-year-old operator of the automobile into court.

Today Hoblitzell, high school tennis star, was fined $5 for using his car as a ferry for an even dozen of his classmates.

"There were 12, of them," Dowling said in district court. "They were hanging on the running board and tucked in every corner."

PAY-AS-GO PLAN SET FOR HUB

A six-year "pay-as-you-go" plan was revealed today by the city planning board, lending the suggestion that Mayor Tobin wants to run again in 1941.

Under the plan, city expenses of approximately $60,000,000 will be budgeted for the first time, it is said, on a scientific, long range basis.

For four months a group of statistically-trained WPA workers have been gathering figures on city expenditures back to 1920.

Equipped with these statistics, Mayor Tobin next month will go to work on the 1940 budget.

Expressed hope is to reduce drastically the city's expenditures.

Currently, it is said, $7 out of a total tax rate of $39.90 is used for debt payments.

Because of Mayor Tobin's interest in nursing the long range program along, political observers believe now he definitely has his political eye on 1941.

At the last city election in November voters approved a referendum which permits Boston mayors to run for re-election.

Captures 2 Men At Gunpoint

Captured at gunpoint after a quarter-mile chase in a commandeered taxi, two Newton men were held in $1000 bonds on charges of breaking and entering in Newton court today.

They are Martin D. Farrell, 26, of Center st., and Leon J. Bertrand, 31, of Pearl st., both Newton.

A Newton citizen saw the men near a Morgan Bros. creamy in Walnut st., Newtonville. He told Patrolman Christopher Bradley that they had kicked in a window. Bradley gave chase. The men fled. The officer commandeered a taxi and overhauled them. Their cases were continued to Dec. 1.

'Stole Show' at Opera But He's Lost Wife

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—Offers to tempt him from the law poured in today on Socialite Richard A. Knight, opera-loving and acrobatic attorney—but they fell on deaf ears and a throbbing skull.

For the man whose somersaults, cartwheels and headstands "stopped the show" at the Metropolitan Opera House wants no part of work. He's going to celebrate a while longer and then hie himself to Pago Pago or Tahiti and go native.

And all because of his great love for his wife, the former Dorothy Ledyard Fenwick, who's bent on a Reno divorce.

Mrs. Dorothy Knight

MME. RETHBERG
His Inspiration

For a second gray morning, the chunky knight of the operatic gymnastics awoke to increasing fame and at least two definite offers of jobs.

Pleased instead of annoyed at Knight's unusual performance, the Metropolitan Opera House wants him next to hang from the chandeliers.

'STOLE THE SHOW'

Although unable to offer a formal contract, Frank Winker of the Met, said the chandeliers have been reserved for any impromptu acrobatics that agile Richard can suggest.

"He stole the show," Winker laughed. "Why, Edward Johnson, general manager of the Met, laughed himself dizzy over it all. He's a star in his own way and we can use him."

Ringling Brothers, quick to spot a man who can really clown, also were reported as more than interested. They have open most any spot he will accept. There were others anxious to cash in on Knight's particular brand of talent—too many to mention.

But the hero of the opera was in a romantic mood today.

"LAWYERS TO BLAME"

"It's all on account of my dear wife," Knight moaned. "I love her so and she loves me. But those awful lawyers are trying to separate us. Those lawyers are to blame."

Right here, short of breath for a man of such heralded athletic talents, he paused in his tale long enough to quench his thirst in a long, cool, foaming beaker of beer.

He's still carrying the torch in flaming style for his dear and beautiful wife, but if she insists on going through with that divorce—well, there's nothing left but a native life where warm breezes blow and the gals have operatic talents all their own.

"I've been so unhappy I had to take to drink," he explained.

"Why, I've been on a bender for six months and when I come out of it and get back in the bright sunshine I'll be in the South Seas.

"My wife and I are crazy about each other, but we had a slight misunderstanding because of a little spanking I gave Mama."

Then Knight lolled back in his Waldorf Astoria suite and began to feel quite good about his appearance at the opera.

"You know," he beamed, "I weigh 210 pounds and I bet I'm the only man of my weight who can turn a flip-flop with a high silk hat on his noggin and have it correctly in place when he's back on his feeet."

Knight was making the society columns with his present trouble with his wife, but his trip to the opera landed him on Page 1.

It started after the first act, when he hailed Mary Steele, New York debbie, and then gayly began his series of acrobatic thrillers that has had all New York talking ever since.

He declared it was the beautiful voice of Mme. Elizabeth Rethberg, famous German soprano, which moved him to such heights.

An obliging steward flipped the cap from a bottle and poured out another long cooler. All of which started the man who gave the opera back to the common people, just the incentive to begin all over again—

"Oh, my wife Dorothy is wonderful. She's marvelous. I love her and she loves me. But she's going to get a divorce and I'm going off to far off places and none of my friends will ever see me again."

Plan Air Base For Squantum

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (INS)—Construction of a series of small air bases in the Atlantic area has been ordered by the Navy Department.

At least eight such aviation bases will be established immediately, officials said today.

Sites for the bases, none of which is expected to cost more than $500,000, are:

Quonset Point, R. I.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Key West, Fla.; Guantanamo, Cuba; San Juan, P. R.; Banana River, Fla., and Squantum, Mass. The eighth base will be located at Floyd Bennett Field, Jamaica, L. I., N. Y., plans for which were announced earlier this week

The new bases are considered necessary to serve the Navy's aviation forces assigned to neutrality patrol duty along the Atlantic.

Commuters Jubilant On Restored Trains

Thousands of commuters throughout Southeastern Massachusetts, harried since last summer by transportation problems, hailed today an order directing the New Haven railroad to reopen 88 stations and restore train service within 10 days.

The sweeping order, unanimously agreed on by members of the Public Utilties Commission, was seen not only as an act to "reclaim" Cape Cod but also an employment boom to scores of workers.

In releasing their findings, the commission branded as "grossly inaccurate" statements made by the road as to certain operating expenses. Members further declared the trustees of the road of "improper and unjustified" presentation of their case for abandonment of the stations.

Of immediate concern to many communities were the stations which have been abandoned since last summer. It was pointed out that many have suffered damage, have been torn down or rented for business use.

Under ruling of the commission, the New Haven must reopen all within 10 days and also restore schedules which were in effect in the various communities as of Feb. 28, 1938.

In a formal public statement today, W. W. Meyer, general counsel for the Old Colony trustees, announced the road's course of action could not be determined until the trustees had opportunity to make further study of the public utilities commission's order.

Meyer said:

"There are three courses that might be followed.

"The road can ask the department of public utilities to reconsider its decision or an appeal to the courts can be made or the road can comply with the order of the department of public utilities.

"Which of these courses will be followed can only be determined after the trustees have had opportunity thoroughly to analyze the order of the department of public utilities."

N. E. THANKSGIVING TO BE OLD FASHIONED

The citizens of the six New England States will celebrate Thanksgiving in old, not New Deal style.

The last Thursday in November, set by President Lincoln in 1864 as Thanksgiving, and carried on traditionally by succeeding Presidents, is the day named by Gov. Saltonstall as Thanksgiving in Massachusetts, where the holiday was founded.

Banks will be closed throughout the state, but because the New York Stock Exchange will be open Boston brokerage houses will be open as usual. The brokers' clearing house will be open and the Boston Stock Exchange will carry on as on local holidays like the 19th of April and June 17.

The letter carriers will make morning deliveries and collections and continue until the volume of mail is handled. Federal courts will be closed, but a staff will be maintained in the clerk's office and the internal revenue department will operate as usual from 8 a. m. until 4:30 p. m.

Santason on Last Leg of Hop To Boston for Big Parade

Santason's silver-tipped North Wind was in Cleveland today on his trip from the North Pole to the Hub for the opening of the Christmas season, and at the crack of dawn tomorrow the intrepid flyer will head for Boston non-stop.

He's due to arrive at the Charles River Basin at 11 a. m. and then join the Santason Thanksgiving Day parade.

BIGGER AND BETTER

The long-anticipated event sponsored each year by Jordan Marsh Co promises to be bigger and better than ever before. This year the parade will be half again as long as the record-breaking parade of a year ago and from start to finish will extend over four miles in length.

A fair idea of his size may be seen in Santason's own words that the first section of the parade will have covered the entire route before the last division has started marching.

There will be well over half a hundred brand new balloons in the parade, balloons that are the most awe inspiring grotesques that the makers could conceive.

Honors for leading the parade will be given to a balloon that stands more than 80 feet in the air, a balloon that is a replica of one of Boston's finest. This balloon is a traffic officer bearing the magic number 7 on his coat and has an old-fashioned billy in his hand.

Not only is he the tallest policeman in the world, but also the fattest, measuring close to 40 feet around his waist. Flatfoot Everett is but one of the many unusual balloons in the parade, not to mention the hundreds of other unusual features such as floats, clowns, feature and specialty acts and costumed marchers. There will be a score or more of floats with 10 of them depicting highlight scenes from the life of "Pinocchio," the famous story book character which will be the theme of this year's parade. There will be 24 of New England's leading bands, hundreds and hundreds of world-famous clowns, hundreds of specialty acts and more than 5000 colorfully dressed marchers, dressed to represent characters from the lands of Fable, Fancy and Nod.

The reception while planned for Santason is something that no child should miss. It is a parade specially created for the fanciful minds of the youngsters, a parade that they long will remember, a parade that has no rival in the entire length and breadth of this land for grandeur, thrills and beauty, not even excluding the famous Mardi Gras of New Orleans.

Fathers and mothers of this generation fondly remember the circus parades of years ago. They think of the thrills that were theirs and remember how for weeks and weeks they looked forward to seeing the many curiosities, animals, clowns, strange people, floats, yes even the circus band.

Since the big top has gone indoors here in Boston there have been no circus parades. In many ways this present generation is more fortunate than the generation that saw dad and mother as youngsters.

This generation has the Santason parade, a thrilling and awe-inspiring spectacle that once seen never will be forgotten.

HIGH DOWD AIDES MAY QUIT, TOO

Foley's office, were in New York checking on haunts of Dowd, one of which he was known to have entered Monday night.

Previously sent to New York were Lt. Insp. John J. Watkins, who carries a warrant for Dowd's arrest, and Insp. Joseph Cunningham.

Still additional information in piecing together the life and habits of the much-wanted Dowd was expected by Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle from a volunteer woman witness.

The woman, in no way connected with the investigation, was said to have known the workings of the Dowd regime through friends and acquaintances and to be ready to tell all.

Testimony given Foley by a new witness, it was said, may lead to several resignations at the jail.

The particular statement that lifted the eyebrows of the district attorney's aides was when he declared:

"It's like breaking sticks to make $20,000 to $25,000 a year down there," referring to the county jail.

He convinced his interogators that he was in a position to know what went on during the reign of ex-Sheriff Dowd.

TALK OF GIVING UP

The rumor persisted that, with the interrogation of witnesses about completed and with the grand jury dismissed today until Monday, Dowd would surrender to Dist. Atty. Foley. Several of his former associates think he is still in, or near Boston, waiting a favorable time to give himself up.

Plans were said to have been completed for his surrender last Sunday, but Dowd is said to have shied away from it because the scrubwomen were telling how much of their pitiful earnings they had to allegedly pay to get, or hold, their jobs.

James Morris, deputy sheriff at the Charles st. jail told yesterday that when Dowd wrote out his resignation on November 10, he exclaimed:

"Things are getting too hot."

When Dowd gave him the resignation, Morris said, he told him to carry it to the governor's office on the following Monday morning, Nov. 13.

"I told him," Morris said today, "that if all the things they were saying about him were true he had better resign. That was after he said things were getting too hot.

"He didn't say anything, but a little while later he handed me the resignation and said, 'You deliver this Monday morning to the governor's office.'"

Morris said that all receipts for food and other supplies and all records of deliveries had been destroyed before Dowd sat down to write out his resignation.

(Behind the Russo-Finnish Carelian frontier within 18 hours.)

DENIED BY FINLAND

In an official communique, the Finnish government deined all knowledge of any incidents in the Carelian Isthmus, as charged by the Russian radio at Moscow.

The communique stated, however, that the Finnish government had been informed from Petsamo in northernmost Finland that border guards had heard mysterious sounds on the Soviet side of the frontier.

Six men, it was stated, were sent out to investigate and never returned to their post.

Red Press Charge 'Hostility' to Finland

MOSCOW, Nov. 29 (INS)—The newspaper Izvestia, official organ of the Soviet government, opened its heavy batteries against Finland today, charging that country with provocation and "open hostility to the Soviet Union."

The Finns have exhausted the patience of the Russian people, Izvestia declared. The newspaper cited alleged suppression of a Soviet publication in Finland as evidence of "hostility."

Meanwhile, the official Soviet news agency, Tass, in a dispatch from Helsinki, said Finnish trains were crowded with soldiers proceeding to an unknown destination.

"Foreign observers in Helsinki regard the situation as grave and expect further Soviet action," Tass said.

Quickly following up the Soviet denunciation of the Russian-Finnish non-aggression pact with a new blow at Helsinki, the Moscow radio charged today that three new "provocative" incidents had occurred along the Soviet-Finnish border.

The radio broadcast, which obviously spoke the mind of the Soviet government, reported three incidents in which Finnish troops allegedly fired on Russian soldiers in Russian territory.

According to the broadcast, five Finnish soldiers crossed the frontier on the Carelian Isthmus and fired upon Soviet frontier guards.

Soviet forces surrounded the Finns, capturing three, while two others escaped, it was stated. Soviet guards in the affected sector were reinforced.

At another point along the border, the radio said, Finns fired five rifle shots across the frontier. The Soviets did not return the fire.

A third incident was alleged to have occurred near frontier post No. 367. It was asserted that Finnish artillery shells exploded there, after which several detachments of Finns attempted to cross the border but were driven back by Russian troops who used machine guns and rifles.

Germans Say British Planes Routed at Base

BERLIN, Nov. 29 (AP)—The German high command announced today British airplanes had attacked the Nazi base on Borkum Island, mouth of the Ems river, but had been beaten off without inflicting damage.

The planes, the communique said, attempted to fly over northwestern Germany by way of the East Frisian Islands, only to be driven back before reaching the coast.

(The British air ministry announced yesterday the Royal Air Force had executed successful reconnaissance flights over northwestern Germany.)

The communique also reiterated a previous announcement of the sinking of a heavy British cruiser by a German submarine.

Another British Ship Sunk by Mine

LONDON, Nov. 29 (AP)—The 1023-ton British steamer Rubislaw sank off the southwest coast of England yesterday within two minutes after striking a mine, it was announced today. Thirteen members of the crew were reported killed.

Four survivors, all injured, were rescued by a minesweeper

BRITAIN ORDERS NAVY 'SEIZE NAZI EXPORTS'

LONDON, Nov. 29 (AP)—Cryptic radio instructions from the admiralty put British warships on the alert today for the scheduled start of a new total blockade against Germany, Monday.

The air ministry, meanwhile, reiterated that all its planes had returned safely after machine-gunning three mine-laying seaplanes yesterday at Borkum, an island base off the northwestern coast of Germany.

"There is no truth whatever in the German statement that our aircraft flew over Holland," said the ministry.

The German official news agency DNB said one British plane was forced down and probably lost in the North sea, and that another flew over the Netherlands to avoid the sea.

THAMES GUNS OPEN UP

Fighting planes took to the air again today as anti-aircraft batteries along the Thames Estuary began firing, but the shooting was not due to a German raid, and no alarm was sounded.

The mining of British waters, with numerous recent shipping losses resulting, was blamed by Britain for the decision to blockade German exports as well as imports.

In conjunction with France, the Royal Navy was instructed to remove from any ship cargoes of German origin or ownership. Heretofore, the blockade has been aimed only at goods destined for Germany.

The starting date of the export ban was set for Monday to permit neutral readjustments. It was understood that goods bought in Germany before Nov. 27 would be exempt, even though not yet at sea.

CITE U. S. OPINION

The London Times said the blockade would be applied "with the greatest possible regard for the interests of neutrals—which in the long run are also British interests."

It added: "In the United States alone there has from the first been a determination to judge the whole question in its broadest aspects."

(Netherlands ships will continue to operate, government sources in Amsterdam said, despite the new restrictions and the sinkings of seven Dutch ships by mines or submarines. It was announced that the Netherlands ships would be equipped with paravanes, devices on the bows to fend off mines.)

British and French sources estimated 35 to 45 German submarines had been sunk since the war began Sept. 3.

The French were credited with having sunk probably 10, and Britain two or three a week.

Borah Fights F. D. on Defense

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (INS)—Two western Senators—Borah (R.) of Idaho and Wheeler (D.) of Montana—today joined the congressional group opposing President Roosevelt's national defense plans.

Borah warned that "you can destroy the citizenship of a country, its morale and its worth almost as effectively through taxation as you can through war."

Wheeler, likewise criticizing the President's suggestions that a national defense tax might be desirable, declared he did not believe the country would stand for any further burden on the "little fellow."

These announcements came as Chairman Taylor (D.) of Colorado, of the House appropriations committee, predicted the estimated $2,300,000,000 for defense for the fiscal year beginning next July 1, would be approved with a minimum of opposition.

NAZIS WITH REDS IN FINN ROW

By PIERRE J. HUSS

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

BERLIN, Nov. 29—Germany today alligned itself morally and sympathetically with Soviet Russia in its dispute with Finland on the ground that the Soviet Union's vital security, existence and rights are involved.

Responsible quarters predicted that in the event of a Russo-Finnish clash, Germany would adopt a position of "benevolent neutrality with full understanding of the Russian attitude."

Under such circumstances, the Reich was represented as determined to stand aside and permit Russia a free hand.

GIRL AIDS ANTI-WAR CRUSADE

A girl truck driver joined the National Legion of Mothers of America today in the nation-wide drive to keep the United States out of war. She is Mrs. Dorothy Szrejna of 2 Hawthorne rd., Wayland, the former Dorothy Clark of Chesterton st., Roxbury.

"I am proud to join your great organization," writes Mrs. Szhejna, "I drive a truck and am 27 years old. I was too young to know about the last war, but every day I see veterans bearing the scars, with legs and arms missing, and old before their time.

"May our young men never have to face the same thing again. God bless America and your Mothers' Legion."

Mrs. Violet Wood, 29 Hawthorne st., West Somerville, writes:

"I was left alone when my son was only a year old. My health was poor and I was very young and didn't have a dollar to start on. Believe me, when I say I have not only struggled but suffered to bring my boy up.

"He has just turned 22, so you can easily see what it would mean to me to have to send him across as a target for some of those insane foreigners. We are Americans of English descent. It is wonderful to think mothers can organize."

Mrs. Mary Pitts, 14 James st., Malden, says:

"I hope every mother, sister, wife and sweetheart will join. If they understood the danger our country faces, I am sure they all would do everything in their power to save our American boys."

Mrs. Therese Murray Hall of 64 East Howard st., Quincy, adds her voice:

"My neighbor next door," writes Mrs. Hall, "is crying her eyes out for her only boy who has just died. I feel sorry for her, but she does not know that I envy her.

"My boy died far away. My neighbor sees her dead son. She knows where he is. She knows that he will be laid away with loving hands and prayers.

"I do not know where my 'baby' is. He is sleeping somewhere 'over there,' far away—alone.

"I have two boys now of military age. They will surely be taken—if we have WAR. When? Where? How? That is why I signed a pledge card."

MOTHER OF BOB

Mrs. Marguerite Moulin of 15 Colonial ave., Lynn, writes:

"Please, may I hasten to add my name to this fast-growing roll of honor? Many Lynn mothers will follow, I am sure, for our fair city has ever been in the front rank in patriotic spirit.

"I, too, have a tall, manly son, now in the Panama Canal Zone, proud to be in the service of his country. But God forbid that he b forced to give his splendid young manhood to strengthen foreign thrones. We want no more of that.

"Broken men at 45—we remember only too well what they were 20 years ago. We want no more hostages to build fortunes for greedy men—fortunes built on the blood of youth. Is there anything more pitiful and un-Christian?

"That it may never happen again is the earnest prayer of the

"MOTHER OF BOB."

The slogans of the Legion of Mothers are:

1—To oppose the sending of American troops to fight on foreign soil.

2—To support a program of adequate national defense.

3—To combat all "isms" whose object is the destruction of the American form of government.

The Legion of Mothers is open to all women, married and unmarried, who are American citizens. No dues are demanded. Kindly sign name and address on pledge card and mail promptly to Box 228, Boston, Mass.

Hub Catholic Women In 'Peace Week' Plea

Several leaders of various Catholic women's organizations in the Boston archdiocese today joined the world-wide movement, instigated by Pope Pius XII, for the observance of "Peace Week."

Saddened by the war, the Holy Father renewed his efforts for world peace by instigating a week of prayer and urging all to join him.

This week was designated by the pontiff, and special prayers for peace, taken from the ancient liturgy of the mass for peace is being recited in all Roman Catholic churches at the conclusion of daily masses.

Pleased by the Holy Father's efforts for peace, not only have Roman Catholics joined in a voice of prayer, but also members of the Protestant and Jewish faiths.

Among the local Catholic groups that have answered the Pontiff's plea for peace include the Propervulis Club, Philomatheia Club, the Guild of St. Francis, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, Daughters of Mary, Women's Catholic Club, St. Elizabeth's Guild and the League of Catholic Women.

Mrs. John W. Gahan, of Newton Centre, president of the Guild of St. Francis, composed of prominent Catholic women in Greater Boston, referring to the Pope's plea for peace, said:

"All creeds and religions should follow the Holy Father's uplifting efforts for peace throughout the world. Catholic women, no doubt, throughout the world will enter full-heartedly into this movement that will bring an insane world, ridden by war madness, back to sanity.

"The Guild of St. Francis appeals not only to its members, but those of other faiths to join in unified spirit, each in his own church and according to the ritual of his own faith, pray that peace may sonn return to a war scourged world.

Speaking in behalf of members of Regis College Guild, Mrs. Edward J. Flynn, president, said:

"Led by the example of Pope Pius XII, the peace maker, the women of America, regardless of race or creed, should join in the observance of Peace Week.

"A unified plea to God should be made to end the strife overseas and the unnecessary butchery of war. Through churches and their affiliated organizations great endeavor should be made to plant into the minds of the people the necessity of thinking and praying constantly for peace."

'Let's Have Peace'

In all Catholic churches throughout the archdiocese of Boston the following prayer for peace will be recited following all masses at the request of His Eminence Cardinal O'Connell:

"Deliver us, we beseech Thee, O Lord, from all evil, past, present and to come, and by the intercession of the Blessed and Glorious Mary, ever Virgin, Mother of God, together with Thy Blessed Apostles, Peter and Paul and Andrew, and all the saints, mercifully grant peace in our days, through the same Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Lord, who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, One God for ever and ever, amen."

Chrysler Auto Strike Ended

DETROIT, Nov. 29 (INS)—The automobile industry's longest strike was ended today as Chrysler Corporation and the CIO's Automobile Workers Union agreed on terms of a new contract.

The 60,000 Chrysler workers idle since Oct. 6 were to begin the return to the plants tomorrow morning and full operations were expected to be reached by Monday or Tuesday.

Although terms of the settlement were not announced immediately, it was learned that the cororation agreed to a blanket wage increase of three cents an hour and to revised mediation machinery in which a bi-party board will hold final judgment.

WAGES AFTER 65 YRS. NOW GO FOR BENEFITS

(Every person who has a Social Security account card has an interest in the new features of Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance which go into effect January 1, 1940. For the benefit of the readers of the Boston Evening American, the Boston office of the Social Security Board has supplied six brief articles each explaining one point of the new provisions. Following is the third of this series.)

Before the Social Security Act was amended, wages earned by a worker after he had become 65 did not count toward benefits.

Under the amended act, this "stop-date" at age 65 has been removed, so that a worker may continue to build up his Social Security account as long as he remains in employment covered by the system.

The worker who was 65 or more when the act first went into effect can now establish a wage record and receive credit, thereon, for all wages paid to him in covered employment since 1938.

In other words, the change with regard to workers past 65 years of age became effective as of Jan. 1, 1939. Beginning with that date, wages received in covered employment count toward insurance benefits regardless of the age of the worker.

This change in the law with respect to older workers is summarized below. The statement applies only to jobs covered by the act.

1—A wage earner who reached age of 65 after 1936 and before 1939, will count toward his benefits wages he was paid after 1936 and before his 65th birthday, plus wages he was paid after 1938, regardless of age.

2—A wage earner who reaches 65 at any time during the year 1939 or thereafter, can count toward benefits the wages he received since the original act went into effect which was January 1, 1937.

3—A wage earner who was 65 years old before January 1, 1937, will count toward his benefits only the wages paid to him after 1938.

(Tomorrow: Qualifying for Monthly Benefits in 1940. For further information call or write the Social Security Board office in Boston, Cambridge, Chelsea, Lynn, Malden, Salem, Quincy or Waltham.)

'Tobacco Road' Stay Extended

The "Tobacco Road" engagement at the Plymouth has been extended a third week by popular demand.

The sale of tickets for the third week of Jack Kirkland's comedy of shiftless, sinful Georgians starts tomorrow morning. The Thanksgiving Day matinee will begin at 3 p. m.

Next Monday will mark the seventh consecutive year on Broadway for "Tobacco Road," which holds the world's record for longevity of a play.

"Tobacco Road," which originally was played for its dramatic values, is now being played for laughs, especially by Charles "Slim" Timblin; as Jeeter Lester.

The Blagdon Players' new production, "Three Cornered Moon," by Gertrude Tonkonogy, will be presented next Wednesday evening at 30 Huntington ave., with Dorothy Ulmer, Kay Brown and Mickey Brustin in the leading roles. It is being staged by John Knoblock.

Club Dancer Turns to Stage

Honey Murray, a Boston girl well-known as a dancer in local cabarets, is a specialty dancer in the musical, "Three After Three," starring Simone Simon, Mitzi Green, and Mary Brian at the Shubert Theater.

Honey is her real name, and it applies equally to her dark blond hair and to her merry disposition.

Born in Woonsocket, R. I., she won a beauty contest at the age of four. One of the judges was a theatrical gentleman named W. H. Myers, who promptly signed her to dance in a kiddie revue, which suited her so well she spent 10 years with it, trouping in every town and hamlet that could boast a raised platform. She teamed with Duke McHale of Providence, late of "Babes in Arms," alternating in a vaudeville double with him, taking time out only for high school in Franklin, Mass.

The week after she left school Honey joined Johnny Marvin, the radio crooner, on a personal appearance tour of vaudeville theaters and night clubs and then graduated into night spots herself.

"I've never had lessons—not since I was 12, anyway," says this personable little dancer. "I hope to become a soubrette in musical comedy, because I can handle comedy and songs as well as dance."

Copley Stock Scores Again

The meritorious Copley Players launched their fifth venture of this season, Scott and Haight's very funny "Goodbye Again" on the ways of the Copley-Shubert theater Monday, for this week's run.

Good is still the word for their work.

Plot of this old-timer, begun by Osgood Perkins and carried on by the movies, concerns a picaresque novelist who arrives in Cleveland (or is it Cincinnati? or even Cincinnati?) only to find an old flame he thought he had turned down, still burning brightly.

He goes to work to put her out, with ensuing complications.

Still in our book: Miss Vola Blakely, charming and deft; Erford Gage, hard-working and capable; Helen Walker—but good; Wendell Corey, the surest actor of the bunch, and now Casey Walters, at times too, too brisk, but with pace and bang.

There were weaknesses and slips—the bit parts took a terrible shellacking—but it's a good stock company, with a lot to offer. J. C.

Ticket Sale Opens At Wilbur Tomorrow

Seats go on sale tomorrow at the Wilbur boxoffice for "When We Are Married," J. B. Priestley's latest comedy-farce which opens a two-week engagement beginning Monday. The cast is headed by such well-knowns as Estelle Winwood, Alison Skipworth, J. C. Nugent, Percy Kirkbride and Ann Andrews. Robert Henderson is the producer-director.

Mohawk Feature at Scollay, Modern

"Drums Along the Mohawk," with Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda, will be the feature attraction on the Scollay and Modern screens, starting Thanksgiving Day. The co-feature on this program will be that ever-lovable Jones Family in "Too Busy To Work."

"Drums Along the Mohawk" tells the story of the days when America was young and men and women with hearts of steel faced treachery, massacre and torture as they fought shoulder to shoulder and ventured forth to new frontiers.

At present, in technicolor, the beautiful valley of the Mohawk aflame as the dreaded war-drums warn of fire and massacre. You will see muskets blazing and swing as hordes of savage red men scale the stockade walls in this action-packed frontier romance.

In the new Jones Family picture, "Too Busy to Work," cornerstones and committees have Dad Jones in a whirl. But Ma Jones is in more of a whirl because she wants to be an actress.

ELSIE ROBINSON writes the woman's viewpoint, discusses regularly in the Boston American every day affairs and problems.

Old Stage Favorite to Star In New Show at Wilbur

The famous Liverpool Theater in England, from which have sprung many of England's most famous stars, also was the scene of the early theatrical experience of Estelle Winwood, Miss Winwood heads the all-star cast in J. B. Priestley's farce-comedy, "When We Are Married," which Robert Henderson will present at the Wilbur Theater, beginning Monday evening.

Surprisingly enough, although her apprenticeship in the theater was spent in serious plays only, under the direction of such notables as G. B. Shaw, John Galsworthy and Granville Barker, her reputation both here and abroad is that of one of the stage's foremost comediennes.

Her first role in the West End of London was in a musical, "Half Past Eight," in which she was seen by Winthrop Ames and invited to come to America under his management.

An immediate success in New York, she appeared in a series of hits, including "A Successful Calamity," "Why Marry," "Little Journey" and "The Circle," and in 1927 played in the all-star revival of "Trelawney of the Wells." England did not see her again until her appearance in London in 1931 in "The Love Game," remaining there to play in "See Naples and Die," "Maya" and "Hotel Universe."

Her return in 1934 to New York, where she had been missed, was marked by fresh triumphs in "The Distaff Side." Miss Winwood since has appeared in "Spring Cleaning," "The Bishop Misbehaves," Priestley's "Eden's End," "I Want a Policeman" and "On the Rocks." She also spent a year in Hollywood, appearing with Katharine Hepburn in "Quality Street."

Two seasons ago Miss Winwood toured extensively in Robert Henderson's production of "Tonight at 8:30," and last season played opposite Clifton Webb in Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest."

'Beachcomber' On Tremont Bill

"The Beachcomber," starring Charles Laughton with Elsa Lanchester, and "Dodge City," co-starring Errol Flynn and Olivia De Havilland, will be seen tomorrow through Saturday at the Tremont.

The Irene Dunne-Charles Boyer picture, "When Tomorrow Comes," and Lana Turner and Lew Ayres in "These Glamour Girls" continue at the Normandie through Thanksgiving Day. On Friday, "In Name Only," and "Buried Alive," will be seen.

'Rigoletto' Tonight's Opera Bill

Tonight's opera, "Rigoletto" by the San Carlo Opera Co. at the Boston Opera House, marks the end of the first week of the 11-day season.

There will be two operas tomorrow, Thanksgiving. In the afternoon "Hansel and Gretel" will be sung in English, and there will be an added program to the matinee bill by the San Carlo Ballet in ballet divertissement, "Viennese Life."

There will be a double-bill also Thanksgiving night when "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" will be the holiday offering. "Madam Butterfly" will have its second performance (with Hizi Koyke) Friday night.

The two operas on Saturday are "Carmen" (with Coe Glade), the matinee opera, and "Il Trovatore" at night. "The Barber of Seville" closes the current season Sunday afternoon (curtain at 3).

"Rigoletto" this evening brings the singing-actor, Ivan Petroff, (the company's "surprise" baritone of last season) again as the jester of Verdi's opera. Gilda, Rigoletto's daughter, will be played by Lucille Meusel; the Duke of Mantua by Francis Perulli; Sparafucile, a bravo, by Harold Kravitt, and Maddalena, his sister, by Charlotte Bruno.

Flock of Stars in New Screen Features

Frank Lloyd's salty epic, "Rulers of the Sea," featuring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood and Will Fyfe, Scotland's gift to comedy, tops the Metropolitan screen bill tomorrow.

Paired with it is "Charlie Chan In City In Darkness," with Sidney Toler as the popular Oriental sleuth.

A little more than 101 years ago, 94 excited passengers embarked on a voyage which was to change the whole history of ocean travel. They had purchased passage from London to New York on the small paddle steamer, Sirius, first ship to attempt the crossing of the Atlantic without the aid of sail.

That epoch-making event is reenacted in "Rulers of the Sea," a thrilling story plentifully seasoned with romance shred by Fairbanks and Miss Lockwood and Scottish humor purveyed by the famed Fyffe.

In the strong supporting cast are George Bancroft, Montagu Love, Vaughn Glaser, David Torrence, and Lester Matthews.

Talbot Jennings, Frank Cavett and Richard Collins collaborated on the script.

'Another Thin Man' For Loew's Patrons

William Powell and Myrna Loy are reunited in "Another Thin Man," another chapter in the thrill-crowded lives of Nick and Nora Charles opening Thanksgiving Day on Loew's State and Orpheum screens.

Nick is again called upon to contribute his sleuthing abilities when Nora's financial advisor is slain during a weekend the Charleses spend with him at his Long Island estate.

Since last you encountered them on the screen, Nick and Nora have acquired a baby, named William Paulsen, Jr., which circumstance is responsible for a baby party in the picture attended by the offspring of Nick's countless underworld "friends."

The supporting cast includes Virginia Grey, Otto Kruger, C. Aubrey Smith, Ruth Hussey, Nat Pendleton and Patric Knowles.

The second feature, "Winter Carnival," has a Dartmouth (Hanover, N. H.) setting, most of the film being shot on the historic campus during last winter's 28th annual winter festival. Ann Sheridan is the campus queen and Richard Carlson, her romantic lead. Others are Helen Parrish, Robert Armstrong, James Corner, Marsha Hunt, Alan Baldwin, Robert Allen, Cecil Cunningham and Virginia Gilmore.

Hollywood Paragraphs

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29—It will be something to watch when those two tried and true scene stealers—Ann Sothern and Virginia Weidler, get together in "Maisie and the Gold Rush."

Annie will have to watch her step, particularly since Virginia is going to play another one of those tough little desert kids like the hard-boiled youngster in "Andy Hardy Out West." Ann, of course, will be the wise-cracking "Maisie" in this yarn about a chorus girl who goes to Arizona to rejuvenate an old gold mine claim. Betty Reinhart is writing the story which J. Walter Rubin will produce.

• • •

Absolutely shocking to receive a wire on the stage while I was dictating items for the column, that Leo McCarey and Gene Fowler had been in a serious automobile accident and that Leo was not expected to live. Thank goodness, the first report was exaggerated.

Leo and Gene were returning from Arrowhead when their car struck another and the RKO director, who is in line for the Academy award for his "Love Affair" was so seriously injured he was rushed to the General Hospital at Covina. Gene was able to be taken to the Good Samaritan Hospital in Los Angeles. Latest word is that Leo is much better which is wonderful news here where his pictures are so popular.

• • •

I'd like to see Mary Martin in "The Great Victor Herbert" to find out for myself just whom she looks like. Three different wires from the coast make the "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" girl sound like a cross between Claudette Colbert, Jean Parker and Louise Campbell.

However, they all agree it's amazing how professional and at ease Mary is in her film debut. And there were plenty of eaves for the 14-year-old child, Susanna Foster, whose soprano voice electrified the previous audience as she took a high "C".

Trans-Lux Shows 'Dark Angel'

"The Dark Angel," which stars Frederic March, Merle Oberon and Herbert Marshall, is the Thanksgiving Day screen offering at the Trans-Lux.

The story concerns three people, Alan Trent, Kitty Vane and Gerald Shannon, who grow up together and are mutually devoted. With the outbreak of the war Kitty finds" it is Alan she loves and when his recall from leave makes marriage impossible she spends the night with him at Flokstone.

In France he is blinded and made prisoner, Kitty and Gerald believe him dead, and at the end of the war he returns to England under another name, having no desire to be dependent upon anyone for charity. Kitty and Gerald meet him accidently and Alan pretends he does not love her because of the fact that he is blind and does not want to be a burden.

Others in the very fine cast are, John Haliday, Janet Beecher and Frieda Inescort.

The co-feature, "Stop, Look and Love," is a story of family-ridden romance, which has a large cast, including Jean Rogers, William Frawley, Eddie Collins, Minna Gombell and Cora Sue Collins.

ELSIE ROBINSON writes a woman's viewpoint, discusses regularly in the Boston American every day affairs and problems.

FIRING SQUAD AT DAWN

by PAUL WHELTON

HIGH ABOVE the chalet the pinnacles of the Alps ranged, with snow-capped heads, silent sentinels over the peaceful scene below.

But the woman they led into the chalet was not in peace. Dull, grey hair, stringy and unkempt, straggled from beneath her bonnet. Her skirt, mussed and awry, hung below a dingy shirtwaist.

Nor did the scuffed boots she wore appear to be the footgear of a woman accustomed to being well and trimly-shod, a woman used to the better things in life—to gay restaurants with sparkling crystal and the tinkle of laughter over glowing wine, of palace drawing rooms, of jewels and gems and silks and laces and perfumes.

Yet this woman, whom they led into the Swiss chalet that was an insane asylum, had known all these things, and at the time had given them little thought.

It was doubtful if she thought of them now, because the woman was mad and the eyes that once were so full of life and vivacity and that saw so many things, without apparently seeing, were now dull and vacant and staring.

A SPY UNMASKED—Although Mlle. le Docteur was able to avoid spy traps until she was sent to a Swiss hospital for the insane, many of her women assistants—such as Mata Hari—were caught, faced rigid search, and faced firing squads at dawn.

There were few—if, indeed, any—who would recognize the new arrival at the Swiss madhouse, this city of the living dead, as Mlle. le Docteur, one of the most brilliant spies of the World War and one of the most ruthless, a woman who utilized her woman's wiles when she could, but killed without qualm when these failed her.

Little more than a decade after the close of that great war, in which her intrigue had played so great a part—the war in which she had been officially announced as executed—The Lady Doctor had lost her mind, and in the Swiss asylum, within a few years, she would die.

Morphine and other narcotics took their toll of the famous woman spy; morphine and other narcotics to which she turned, perhaps, in an attempt to find surcease from the memories of the war and of the men and women she had sent to their deaths.

Mlle. le Docteur was Anne Marie Lesser, majestic beauty, with the figure of a Greek goddess and the cold, ruthless mind of a Bengal tigress on the hunt.

Born of a widely-known Berlin art dealer and an Italian-born mother who was a native of Brioni, the girl became a secret service agent for Germany at the age of 17 and by accident.

Brilliant of mind she had just been entered in college for the profession of medicine and surgery when she accompanied her wealthy father on a business trip to St. Petersburg, Russia, in 1908.

FATHER and daughter were guests of a Russian general with whom art collection was a hobby, and undoubtedly because she was stopping at the home of the Russian officer she interested a German officer to whom she was introduced at a party.

What subtle means he used to swing this young girl around are not known, but in all probability he played on her patriotism to extract her promise of aid.

Germany, he said, was anxious to learn the plans of a reported new Russian gun, and the plans were then known to be in the home of the general. Would beautiful Fraulein Lesser attempt to get a copy of the plans for the Fatherland?

Beautiful Fraulein Lesser not only would, but she did. In some way she ferreted out the plans of the gun and copied them, as she had been instructed to do.

And with that act she discarded one career and adopted another. Not long after she had returned to Berlin, she and her parents were approached by agents of the Imperial German Secret Service.

Anne herself was not disturbed by what the agents said, although her father and mother were at first. Their little girl a spy? But finally they consented, and the career of Mlle. le Docteur as a German agent was launched—to run until her mysterious vanishing, midway during the war, when it was falsely announced that she had been executed.

In that same year, 1908, she was again a visitor to Russia, this time coming under disturbed notice of the Russians during the time of the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

In 1911 she attracted the attention of the French during the Agadir crisis in Morocco and during the following year she was the object of English observation.

Not only was she clever and charming, and not averse to a supposedly stolen kiss, but at the other extreme she is described by Edwin T. Woodhall, formerly of the Special Branch of the British Criminal Investigation Department and the wartime British Secret Service, as a woman whose claws were always ready to be unsheathed.

Woodhall, who had reason to encounter her in the early war days, says she had little success personally as a spy in Britain, by reason of the fact that she was too closely watched.

"Any success she may have attained," according to Woodhall, "was in France or Russia."

IN those countries, however, she certainly did win success. In the first month of the war she was sent into East Prussia and made her way back of the Russian lines.

Through a message sent by carrier pigeon from her hotel behind that Russian front she gave the German staff the Russians' positions and their approximate strength.

As a result the Germans, in a surprise attack under Hindenburg, Ludendorf, Hoffman and Francois, drove a wedge between the two Russian armies and drove them back in a precipitate retreat at Tannenberg, under Gen. Samsonov.

This disaster to Russia, ending in the Mazurian Swamps, was a complete triumph for the Boche in the six days closing August, 1914, and was climaxed by the suicide of Samsonov, who took his life rather than face disgrace.

The first report of her death came after this retreat. It was given out that the beautiful spy, now 23 years old, had been spotted by an officer of the Russian Secret Service, who recognized her as a German woman spy he had seen in Vienna in late 1908.

This report had her arrested, denounced as a spy and shot just before German cavalry galloped into the town, too late to save her.

Mlle. le Docteur was very much alive, however, as later events proved.

One instance of her ruthlessness came at a time when she was in Paris and received documents and information so valuable that she determined to deliver these to Berlin personally.

Her route led through Switzerland where, at the border, she was stopped by a guard. Smiles moved him not, so The Lady Doctor took him aside to talk more seriously.

A short time later other guards heard a shot ring out. Rushing to the spot they found their comrade dead on the ground, the beautiful girl whose papers they doubted gone in flight.

In another instance, this time in occupied Belgium, she shot and killed a young officer in the Belgian Secret Service who had been posing as a friend of Germany.

WHAT THE Belgian was after was the identity of spies working with her, and his efforts in this regard cost him his life.

His one mistake was that he betrayed one of her spies on the strength of information possessed only by himself and Mlle. le Docteur.

She needed no blackboard to figure out who had been the informer here. Calling him to her room she accused him of treachery—then shot him dead.

She made no pretense at secrecy in Holland, where Germany had several spy headquarters, and she walked openly through the streets of Antwerp and Amsterdam and Rotterdam, with British Secret Service agents, who came to know her by sight as well as reputation, powerless to arrest her because they all were in a neutral country.

Among the agents of Mlle. le Docteur was the notorious Dutch dancer, Marguerite Gertrud Zelle, who had taken the exotic name of Mata-Hari and who eventually came to be executed at Versailles, France, Oct. 15, 1917.

It was The Lady Doctor who assigned Mata-Hari to work in France under the infamous Greek, Coudyanis, main agent for Germany in the French territory.

Also it was through Coudyanis' jealous fiancee that Anne Lesser was nearly trapped by the French, when she went to Paris to give the Greek some instructions too valuable to be conveyed except verbally.

Adroitly eluding the French Secret Service agents who had laid a trap for her, Mlle. le Docteur fled France.

Returning to Paris a few months later she administered a drubbing to the jealous girl who had turned her in, then received the valuable documents which she was conveying to Berlin when she shot the Swiss border guard.

The French would have been delighted to send Mlle. de Docteur before a firing squad at Versailles, but they never could catch this elusive beauty, although many times she narrowly escaped.

THEN, suddenly, came another report that the woman spy had been executed. The report was given seeming credence when she failed to reappear at headquarters in Antwerp and never was heard from further.

What became of her for years has always been a mystery, but it may be more than a probability that the strain of her exciting life had begun to break that steely nerve and she had started to resort to narcotics in the flagging of her waning courage.

At any rate, nothing is known of her life until the day in July, 1929, when she was taken to the Swiss insane asylum and the doors closed behind her forever.

The Lady Doctor, who had been characterized by the German espionage chief, Nicolai, as "the master brain of spies," died there a few years later—her once-beautiful body ravaged and wasted, her once-keen mind a blank.

A different sort of end was that of another beautiful woman spy, Blanche Potin, born in Brussels of a French mother and Belgian father and living there and in Antwerp until she was 18.

Then she became a professional dancer and soubrette and made many appearances in Paris, Vienna, Berlin and other cities of the Continent, a clever, attractive girl who loved and was loved and whose courtiers, dazzled by this footlight personality, were many.

As a result of certain overtures she went to work for the French in obtaining diplomatic and military information while continuing her stage tours in the naval and military centers of the German Empire.

She was sent to Holland at the beginning of 1916, and there discovered secrets of German espionage which enabled the Allies, for a time, to block Boche spy efforts in that neutral country.

IN Brussels and Antwerp, the French had two very reliable agents and Blanche Potin was instructed explicitly to give her reports to these trusted spies, as the risk consequent upon her sending anything through personally to France was too great.

Things seemed to work out according to plan. For some few weeks after her arrival in Brussels, messages were received from the agents relaying the information Blanche was securing.

Then for three months there was a dead silence from her. The baffled agents, responding to queries from officials in France, were forced to admit that they were not hearing from Blanche.

Had she been discovered by the German counter-espionage, and been arrested? The agents sent other agents to investigate and it was startling when they reported back what they had learned.

Mlle. Blanche, the agents said, was a traitor to France.

The one thing every country feared in connection with woman spies—that their hearts might triumph over their heads and their loyalty—had occurred in the case of Mlle. Blanche.

She had fallen in love with a highly-placed German Intelligence officer, sentiment winning out over reason and patriotism. Not only that, but Mlle. Blanche had disclosed to the German officer the names of all the reliable agents of the Allied Secret Service known to her.

One by one they were being rounded up, tried and executed as spies.

Whether Blanche Potin learned that her treachery had been discovered and that she was marked for death on sight, at the hands of any Allied agent who might find her, or she was discarded by her German lover once he learned he had obtained all information possible from her, is not known.

At any rate she fled Belgium, or disappeared from Belgium, while the German Intelligence agent remained.

The year 1916 was fast fading, and the fateful year of 1917, when America would enter the war, was nearly upon the world.

In a small hotel in Copenhagen, Denmark, a maid entering a tousled room took one look at the bed, uttered a frightened shriek and fled.

Hotel attaches, after hearing her excited story, went to the room. On the bed was the body of an attractive woman. She had been strangled to death and apparently no one know when or by whom.

IN France the description was studied with interest by officials of the Secret Service. Blanche Potin's dossier was brought out and her description carefully checked.

At the end they nodded their heads solemnly. And a German officer in Belgium blandly went on with his counter-espionage work—perhaps by now wooing some other girl who would disclose secrets.

And in Copenhagen the body of the woman went into a lonely grave.

TOMORROW, on the traditional "Last Thursday in November," New England observes Thanksgiving Day.

In the truly religious spirit of our Colonial ancestors, who turned to God in humbleness and gratitude for protection from the dangers of the wilderness and deliverance from the powers of wickedness, we too pledge anew our firm reliance on the eternal mercy of Divine Providence.

We are THANKFUL that ours is a glorious country with a glorious history and a glorious heritage.

We are THANKFUL for our democracy, in which blessings beyond the dreams of those who laid the foundations of our liberty are the priceless possessions of the least of us.

We are THANKFUL for freedom to believe in God and to live according to the principles and virtues which are taught us in His name.

We are THANKFUL for the repudiation of Communism, Fascism and other alien tyrannies by our God-respecting people.

We are THANKFUL for the return of hope to the thousands of our fellow citizens who are going back to work after long periods of unemployment.

We are THANKFUL that our sons are not dragged from their jobs to do a year or two in barracks and garrisons.

We are THANKFUL that there are thousands of miles of water between us and the madmen of Europe and the trouble seekers of Asia.

We are THANKFUL that our young men are sharing the comfort of our firesides and not falling prey to the flames of European war.

We are THANKFUL that our mothers and fathers remember the last international conflict and recall the ingratitude, hate and scorn that the victors heaped upon us after they had gorged themselves with booty.

We are THANKFUL that the hypocritical appeals to our sympathies and passions which fooled us once have long since been exposed and consequently no longer fool us.

We are THANKFUL that we have concluded no entangling alliances with any foreign power and can honestly say our good will extends to all nations and all peoples.

We are THANKFUL that we have inherited a land and government created in the light and plan of DIVINE INTENTION and that God's way has been the AMERICAN WAY.

Truly, we should get down on our knees, in our homes and our churches and within the hallowed circle of our families and in the happy company of our friends and THANK GOD FOR AMERICA, the one country which has had both the WILL to understand the blessings attainable by all men and the COURAGE to make these blessings real.

And, as we arise from our knees to prepare ourselves for the holy Christmastime, let us CONTINUE TO BE THANKFUL TO GOD, from Whom the least and the greatest of our favors flow.

A WORTHY OBSERVANCE of Thanksgiving is the continued and unfailing work of New England women who are hourly increasing the membership of the National Legion of Mothers of America.

These women, many of them mothers of sons who would be called for service on battlefields if this country unwisely involved itself in another European conflict, are truly thankful that the United States remains at peace with all the world.

But they remember the events that preceded our participation in the last great war, recall the propaganda that clouded our better judgment, and have not forgotten the ingratitude that was our reward.

Consequently they are CONSTANTLY VIGILANT.

The patriotic program of the Legion of Mothers is THEIR PROGRAM. They, too, say:

We oppose sending American troops to fight on foreign soil.

We support a program of ADEQUATE national defense.

We are against all "isms" whose object is the destruction of the American form of government.

BOSTON APPLAUDS Mayor Tobin's announcement that this city is shortly to have its first major airplane factory.

Hundreds of jobless men will welcome the employment opportunities that will be created by the establishment of a new industry.

Our railroads are equipped effectively to speed the completed planes to all parts of the country and thus to render good service for the revenue they will receive.

Aircraft manufacturing is a rapidly growing business, supporting 79 factories, employing more than 11,500 men and paying them wages that annually exceed $15,000,000.

Boston, because of its better climate, excellent location and intelligent workmen, deserves a larger share of this prosperity than it has received in the past.

Human Side of News

-:- By EDWIN C. HILL

THIS GENERATION of American youth is running to muscle and brawn. In the press coop at a football game the other day, I asked some of the old rail-birds, whose memories range far back, how the teams of today would compare in poundage with those of the previous generation.

The collective answer boils down to this: If any of the teams of 30 or 40 years ago had hung up their uniforms when they quit, the lads of today just couldn't get into them.

It was agreed that this is not due to the more intensified scouting of today which rounds up more of the big boys. They just come in larger sizes all along the line—that's all there is to it.

The talk ranged back through the chill autumn winds of many a yesteryear to the Gargantuan Heffelfinger of Yale; Niel Snow of Michigan; "Bull" Wheeler and "House" Janeway of Princeton. There were giants in those days, but as they trot off to the showers—to Valhalla, some of them—we replace them with super-giants.

HERE'S Princeton with a line averaging well over 207 pounds; Georgetown has two lines, one averaging 203 and the other 205; Southern California runs well over 200 pounds on the hoof, as does Tulane.

Backfields similarly run to bulk, as compared to the former. Here's Kimbrough, Texas A. & M. halfback, weighting 200 pounds and running and dodging like a jack rabbit.

While backfields are also proportionately heavier, they are as

CHARLES ATLAS
"Sculptors Chase Him"

fast if not faster than those of the days when greased lightning came only in small packages—like little Walter Eckersall, of Chicago.

When you come to consider the requirements for speed and agility, not only in the backfield but in the line—with mobility essential in guards and tackles, as well as ends—you get a picture of ascendant physical prowess which is a fitting complement to the machine age of speed, power and precison. We seem to be living up to the dynamics of our day.

Pertinent to all this was a little story in the paper the other day in which was chronicled the forty-seventh birthday of Charles Atlas, the physical short-ender who now is billed as "the world's most perfectly developed man."

Sculptors chase him up side streets to get him to pose for them and he meets himself in effigy wherever he goes—here Alexander Hamilton, there George Washington, or perhaps Hercules. As he reached manhood he was a sickly weakling.

HE SAYS systematic, continuous exercise worked the miracle. A contest by a New York newspaper gave him his title. At 47, he drives a 120-penny nail through a board with his bare hand and drapes a 200-pound weight around his neck like a scarf. He says we can all get that way if we start young and work hard at it.

That's grand, but it seems that this or that Napoleon is apt to be a runt. At any rate, we are making ourselves physically fit, and that might be a good starting point for more ambitious social reform.

We have noted recently that several of the big, new apartment houses in New York City are putting in completely equipped gymnasiums for their tenants, and organizing classes for persons of varied age and physical stamina, under trained instructors.

It appears to be something different from Theodore Roosevelt's "red-bloodedness." He coached us sbrilly to "hit the line hard" and he exemplified the possibilities of converting yourself from a weakling to a Sandow, but there was a febrile excitement in all this, lacking in today's much calmer and more widespread interest in physical conditioning.

-:- MY DAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—When I drove past the Lincoln Memorial yesterday, I noticed model boats were being sailed in the reflecting pool. Some enterprising owners had put a deep red sail and a blue one on their boats, which reminded me of the sailboats in the Adriatic.

As a nation, we are really getting more of an eye for color.

I hope our enjoyment will increase, for on gray days such as we have in November, it is really a great thing to see splotches of color in the landscape.

I HAD a very young and somewhat distant cousin, Miss Catherine Davis, to lunch yesterday. She is down here working in the Agricultural Department.

A graduate of Bennington College, she is with Senator Davenport's group of young people who enter the government service for a period of practical experience.

She brought a friend, Miss Gretchen Ahlswede, who is working in the Department of Commerce personnel office. Both of them seemed interested in their Washington life, and I hope to see more of them during the winter.

A daughter of a friend in Poughkeepsie, Miss Catherine

FIRST LADY AT JUNIOR LEAGUE SESSION
Mrs. L. Metcalfe Walling, Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Cecil L. Jones

Conger, who is attending Catholic University, also came to lunch. We took a sight-seeing trip around the second floor of the White House after lunch.

Two of my old League of Women Voters friends, Miss Marguerite Wells, national President, and Mrs. George Gellhorn of St. Louis, Mo., also came to lunch.

I think they would have liked to annex, for League of Women Voters work, all the young people at the table.

I like this attitude of wanting to draw in the young people, for I have a feeling that many organizations fail in vitalizing their work, because they are not willing to give young people enough responsibility to make the work interesting.

That is why we find so many organizations filled predominately with older men and women, when, in order to continue the work, new blood must come in.

I am leaving here for New York City to fill a number of engagements in the next two days.

"So, we'll go up to Westchester and have another wedding ceremony performed." . . . "Jimmy Walker met State Senator Abe Marovitz of Illinois," a radio official relates at the Troc, "and Marovitz told him that when he asked for additional patronage the Democratic whip reminded him he had only one vote. 'Always remind people,' Walker advised, 'that the one little vote you have is uncertain—you never know which way it's going to go.'"

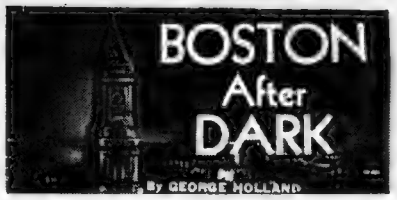
"Bigelow, who spends all his birthdays with Kaiser Wilhelm, at Doorn, said that he'll have to forego the ceremony this year." . . . "In Washington," a Federal official reports at the Martinique, "they've started a rumor again—that Undersecretary of the Treasury, John W. Hanes, will resign early next year." . . . "Look at this letter, which was just forwarded from London," Larry Adler tells C. V. R. Thompson, of the London Daily Express, at the Stork Club. "It's from soldiers at the front lines. "A GROUP of big-time authors will write a series of Thomas E. Dewey biographies, and have them distributed among the small-town papers, without a fee," an editor informs at Moore's. "The campaign headquarters are at a swanky mid-town hotel." . . . "Artie Shaw will return soon, with a Black-and-White orchestra, without Swing," a musician assures at the Tavern. "Shaw may have done a wise thing in quitting his current set-up. Too many people split his salary, and, in addition, he had to face a number of law suits, which now can be settled."



CAUGHT IN THE END ZONE (ONSIDE): The local syndicate seeking an "exclusive" for a dice game in the Back Bay has been rebuffed . . . A friend of Police Commissioner Timilty whom they approached with an offer of a thousand dollars a week is angry . . . The Commissioner himself plans to continue an administration already featured by stern honesty, by keeping it on the same level plane . . . Glenn Miller is rehearsing for the same kind of a dive from the popularity heights which saw Artie Shaw plummeting to a spot in possible peaceful and unprofitable obscurity—and a rest south of the border . . . As the first reporter to predict Miller's sensational rise to his current place near the top among the bandsmen, we mark the clouds of disfavor regretfully . . .

GRANTED THAT SHAW AND MILLER and all of their rivals have a right to view the species "jitterbug" or "alligator" with the same degree of horror that Paulette Goddard plays canary to the cat in Bob Hope's first decent picture—it was the "jitterbug" whose clamor made the Shaws and Millers rich . . . They certainly must have anticipated creation of a Frankenstein in a fan following addicted to the type of music they demonstrate . . . Now it's the gangling—and shy - Glenn who is taking his admirers lightly, some ex-admirers swear . . . Six or seven complaints have reached this desk already . . . A wounded "alligator" communicates a gripe faster than two-four time by a mystic process of thought transference similar to the storied grapevines—no drums, no Western Union nor smoke-signals—of Darkest Haiti or Africa . . . In this respect, the jungle of swing and its denizens compare favorably to the Martin Johnson jungles and theirs . . . (Example, Artie Shaw) . . . We hope Glenn reads this story and the condition complained of remains localized to Boston and vicinity, which would be a miracle.

AND HERE—BEFORE GETTING ALONG TO KAY KYSER—is a footnote on Artie Shaw . . . Artie is ill . . . His adored one, Betty Grable, does not know the particulars that she may be spared worry . . . The Grable-Shaw marital union is an odds-on proposition to happen . . . A representative of 20th Century-Fox was here in Boston with a seven-year contract ready for Betty's signature . . . NELSON EDDY ROLE TO UNKNOWN

Nelson Eddy

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 29 — Just heard one of those strange quirks of fortune stories that come out of Hollywood every once in a while. It isn't news that for some time M-G-M has been trying to buy the rights of "The Desert Song" from Warners. It would be a "natural" for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, for, even when production standards have not been up to par, this romantic musical has always made money because of the beautiful tunes.

The deal was almost set for Warners to let it go as they have no top notch singing stars on the lot. But just in the past day or so the studio has gone overboard on the tests Dennis Morgan has made for the Red Shadow. And this is where the strange quirk comes in - Dennis, under the name of Stanley Warner was once under contract to M-G-M as a potential "threat" in case Nelson ever started acting up! With this unexpected complication it looks like Warners will keep "The Desert Song" and star the one time "threat" in a role tailor-made for Eddy.

DAILY STORY — Second Marriage

I SAW their romance blossom under my eyes, and I saw, in the beginning, what nobody dreamed of—the queer tangent it took later. If there is such a thing as a perfectly happy and compensatory triangle, it is theirs.

Fred was a division chief in a prominent Government bureau when Sally came, weeping, into his life. Yes, she knew how to weep—exquisitely. She was Southern, plantation bred, used to men's homage; a young, pretty widow with a two-year-old son. Fred was approaching 40, the cynical bachelor, man-about-town type. In fact, he was a heavy drinker and just about to go to pieces.

I THINK they knew they were made for each other the moment she walked into his office, with her innocent blue eyes misty with tears, her air of appealing frailty, her inexperience and helplessness. You see, Fred's women had all been the worldly kind—hard little debs and self-sufficient stenographers. Sally was the real thing—femininity plus.

Well, as I've said, we could all see the thing developing day by day—the gradual transformation of a cynic into a man genuinely in love for the first time in his life and as sentimental as a schoolboy.

There was one drawback to their happiness. Fred did not like children, and he particularly did not like Sally's son.

SALLY MANAGED it beautifully. She acquiesced in everything Fred suggested. Junior would go abroad alone. Meanwhile, on Fred's every visit, Junior was tactfully kept in the background, except for a few moments each time, when Fred saw him at his best, in his most appealing mood.

By the time Fred and Sally were ready to marry, Fred was so attached to Junior he couldn't bear to be separated from him. They didn't go abroad. Fred sold his town house, got a lovely place in the country, and now Junior is lord of the manor.

Fred is a different person. He has practically given up drink; can talk of nothing but his son's career. Sally looks a little neglected, a little wistful at times. But the triangle was her own making, and one any woman might be proud of.

LISTEN, WORLD! — By Elsie Robinson

GRAPE FRUIT, canned soup, sweet potatoes, cranberry sauce, chicken—maybe hamburger—perhaps! pumpkin pie, raisins and nuts for the kids! There you have it—scribbled on a bit of wrapping paper, tucked into the corners of millions of shabby shopping bags—the makings of the average American Thanksgiving dinner. And a better-than-middlin' one at that.

Doesn't sound very exciting, does it! Not much like those gorgeous gorgings of early Colonial times. What a laughing and a chaffing there was, at those first Thanksgivings . . . what a glory of color and smell! Trenched fires blazing in the open . . . fat joints turning on the spits . . . shoat and pheasant, grouse and deer, salmon, rabbit, coon and bear!

And the hand-hewn boards heaped high with the pickings from a hundred fields and kitchens—pumpkins, apples, cakes and pies . . . tankards of brown ale . . . And the golden light lying gentle as the blessing of God Himself on the resting fields . . . And a voice saying, above a sudden hush, "Father, we give Thee thanks!"

BUT you're wrong! Life wasn't all beer and skittles for those old chaps any more than it is for us today. Take away the glamour history has lent them and they are a few, weak men battling a wilderness. There were loneliness, sickness and poverty to be endured. Redskins lurking in the forests, wolves and panthers on the trails. And many a mouth that was set for turkey had to chew on jerkie, instead.

But, because of their very weakness and isolation, they had discovered a secret which would take the sting out of any pain or fear. They had discovered the beauty of Giving—the blessedness of Sharing.

GIVING AND SHARING . . . AMERICA WAS BUILT ON THOSE TWO "ACTS OF GRACE."

GIVING AND SHARING, these are our strength now as they were in the past—and our salvation. Today we face a darker wilderness than ever our fathers knew—a crueler circle of greed and hate, one thing only can withstand that hate—and keep us, as a people, whole and free. Not force. Not selfish hoarding. BUT SHARING AND GIVING AS OUR FATHERS SHARED AND GAVE THREE HUNDRED YEARS AGO . . . IN LOVE FOR ALL . . . WITH THANKS TO GOD FOR HIS ABUNDANCE.

DOES WRONG DIET AFFECT HEART?

HOW MUCH SALT DO YOU NEED?

By DR. WALTER H. EDDY
Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau

I should like to know if a functional disturbance of the heart is caused by wrong diet. The heart appears normal except for occasional intermissions which seem to occur when there is gas on the stomach. There is a tendency toward rapid heart action. Would regulated diet correct this annoying condition? -MISS E. C., Mass.

Gas in the stomach is frequently a disturber of heart action. Evidently, if you get conditions such as you describe, they should be diagnosed and treated by a physician.

When gas develops in the stomach, it is usually due to alcoholic fermentation resulting from the action of yeasts on the sugars in the foods. On the fermentation produced there develops an acidity from the fermented products.

Good Housekeeping Bulletin Service distributes a leaflet, "Hyperacidity and Fermentation" (price 5c and a stamped and addressed envelope), which might interest you. Frequently heart disturbances follow thyroid derangement, which is another reason for urging you to consult a physician.

Not Necessary to Eliminate All Table Salt

Knowing that salt in the diet in excess is harmful, and also that the body requires normally a small amount of salt, would it be harmful if one eliminated entirely the use of table salt? Would one obtain a sufficient amount of salt in a regular, well-balanced diet consisting of plenty of vegetables and fruits, and meat about three or four times a week?—H. W. S., Minn.

You could get enough salt in your food and water for the purpose of producing hydrochloric acid in the stomach, even if you did not add additional quantities to your food. Some localities contain much more salt naturally in the soil and water than others, and food grown in those regions, and the well water would contain more salt. For the sake of palatability many prefer to add a trace of salt to the food. Such use stimulates digestion.

If you like the taste of unsalted foods, however, and if you use plenty of fruits and vegetables there is no objection to your eliminating additional salt. If you find such foods unpalatable when unsalted I should have no fear of using table salt in moderation.

Just Nonsense

Is it true that eating bread, cake and pie causes one's hair to turn gray? Or is there more foundation to the idea that there are three causes, heredity, illness and extreme nervousness? I am also interested in knowing what to do to prevent it, if possible. I am 27 and find that the gray hair is appearing quite rapidly. Although I am well and not inclined to worry much, there is a tendency in the family for the hair to turn at an early age.—MISS F. S., Ohio.

There is no truth whatever in such a statement. Heredity, illness, and nervousness are much more likely to be the cause of the early appearance of gray hairs than diet, even if the diet should be an improper one.

There is nothing you can do to stop the graying of the hair when Nature has once made up her mind to stop pigmentation, except to observe such methods of living and eating as will keep you in the best possible condition. This may retard the graying of the hair, but it will not restore color to the hair already gray, and it probably will not keep the hair from continuing to turn gray, although it may delay the process somewhat.

Santa Goes With These

By ARLINE GOULD

WHAT better expression of holiday cheer than a jolly old Santa himself, concealing beneath his broad belt a decorative bottle of a really choice fragrance?

Old-fashioned Christmas is much more popular these days than stream-lined expressions of it . . . like blue reindeer, chromium Christmas trees, or a Santa that looks more like an airline pilot than the cheerful, jelly-belly sort we've always admired . . . so it's with this thought that a famous house has done up its nicest things in old Santa himself, or some of his appurtenances.

If you want something really elegant, for $4.25 you may have a giant size (16 ounce) bottle of exquisite cologne tucked under the belt of a beeg Santa, very red and frosty white.

Or you might choose to take his boot, with a purse-size perfume flacon peeking over the top. This is $1.50. And for the same price you may have a smaller Santa figure, with four-ounces of cologne.

For $3.50 you get a pair of bath aids—and Santa. A two-dollar bottle of cologne and a one-fifty box of dusting powder.

If you'd like to know the name of the shop featuring these Santa-ish Christmas gifts, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, weekdays until 5:30, or write, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Love

Conceit Remedy

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

He's hard-working, has a good personality but is very conceited. Sometimes he wants to see me every day, other times he doesn't care about seeing me at all. He says his reason is he can't take me places, give me presents. I told him that didn't count.

I'm afraid if we marry, it will always be the same. Will he ever get over his terrific conceit, or should I drop him? We both love each other. I'm 19, he's 20. T.

Sometimes conceit is not unlike measles or any other childish complaint.

I think it's manly of him to come out and say frankly that he doesn't see you every night because he hasn't money to spend on you. More manly than if he bluffed or borrowed.

ROAST TURKEY

Singe and wash the singed and dressed turkey. Rub with salt and pepper, inside and out, and stuff, pressing the stuffing firmly into the fowl. Tie the legs down firmly to the body and place in a roasting pan. Grease well with unsalted fat or olive oil, dredge with flour and place in a hot oven (about 450 deg. F.) to sear the outside quickly and prevent the escape of the inner juices. After about 25 minutes lower the heat to a moderate oven (375 deg. F.); baste with water to which a small amount of butter and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce have been added. Cover the pan, if desired, and bake until the breast is tender. Baste several times during the baking and allow from 20 to 25 minutes per pound of turkey.

TURKEY STUFFING

Crumble 1 loaf slightly dry bread, and season with salt and pepper to suit the taste. Add ½ cup melted butter, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 onion, very finely minced, and ½ teaspoon cinnamon, if desired. Mix thoroughly and press firmly into the turkey. This makes a rich crumbly stuffing, and is deliciously seasoned.

MINCE MEAT PIE

Line a piepan with pastry rolled to ⅛ inch thickness. Fill with mince meat, using a one-pound can or jar of mince meat for an average size pie. Moisten edge of crust with a few drops of water and cover with a top crust, which has been slit in several places to allow the escape of steam. Press edges firmly together and bake in a hot oven (450 deg. F.) for 15 minutes. Reduce temperature and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) until done, or until mince meat boils. A few drops of cream brushed over the top of the pie helps to make it brown nicely.

You Can Be Beautiful

Santa Goes With These

By ARLINE GOULD

WHAT better expression of holiday cheer than a jolly old Santa himself, concealing beneath his broad belt a decorative bottle of a really choice fragrance?

Old fashioned Christmas is much more popular these days than stream-lined expressions of it . . . like blue feindeer, chomium Christmas trees, or a Santa that looks more like an airline pilot than the cheerful, jelly-belly sort we've always admired . . . so it's with this thought that a famous house has done up its nicest things in old Santa himself, or some of his appurtenances.

If you want something really elegant, for $4.25 you may have a giant size (16 ounce) bottle of exquisite cologne tucked under the left of a beeg Santa, very red and frosty white.

Or you might choose to take his boot, with a purse-size perfume flacon pecking over the top. This is $1.50. And for the same price you may have a smaller Santa figure, with four-ounces of cologne.

For $3.50 you get a pair of bath aids—and Santa. A two-dollar bottle of cologne and a one-fifty box of dusting powder.

If you'd like to know the name of the shop featuring these Santa-ish Christmas gifts, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, weekdays until 5:30, or write, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Love

Conceit Remedy

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

He's hard-working, has a good personality but is very conceited. Sometimes he wants to see me every day, other times he doesn't care about seeing me at all. He says his reason is he can't take me places, give me presents. I told him that didn't count.

I'm afraid if we marry, it will always be the same. Will he ever get over his terrific conceit, or should I drop him? We both love each other. I'm 19, he's 20. T.

Sometimes conceit is not unlike measles or any other childish complaint.

I think it's manly of him to come out and say frankly that he doesn't see you every night because he hasn't money to spend on you. More manly than if he bluffed or borrowed.

Fashion Is a Gift

SHE'LL BE spellbound . . . when you hand her a big box and, amid the rustling of tissue, she brings out something gay, sparkling, something to enhance the enchantment of her little self . . . any one of these ultra-ultra fashions we've chosen to show today!

Really important in feeling is the dinner-evening outfit, upper left. And that is because when the jacket comes off there is a truly distinguished dress under it! Certainly not the kind of outfit that Gives All to the jacket and leaves the dress a nonentity. It is black crepe, with appliques of gold kid scrolled with golden embroidery, very Schiaparelli with its longer, fitted lines. Some of the applique is transferred to the shoulder straps of the dress, and the bra-bodice is made of little pleats. Slim though the skirt is, in back it boasts a shirred-in, low-placed fullness. $14.95, if you please!

Right, a trailing velvet evening wrap . . . to make a duchess of you . . . Tuck fingers cozily in the round lapin muff which matches the collar of the wrap. Outfit complete, $16.95.

Manners

Most Important Invitation

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper to send an invitation to the parents of the bridegroom-to-be?

Yes, not only proper but most important is this invitation. The parents of the bridegroom are the guests of honor of the occasion. This is why they sit on the RIGHT side of the aisle down which the processional is to pass, and this is why the bridegroom's mother sits at the right of the bride's father at the wedding breakfast, and why the bridegroom's father sits at the right of the bride's mother.

Holiday Tasks Are Lighter

By MARTHA LEE

The American tradition for hospitality reaches its peak each year at Thanksgiving. Then, if no other time, do we call in our families and round up our friends for a big gathering of the clan. But the great feasts of yesteryear would tax our small kitchens and impose so on our time that they would become a burden to the homemaker and kill the spirit of this gracious day.

Fortunate it is for us then that so many fine flavor aids and ready-to-serve holiday foods are at hand to lend an air of bounteous elegance to the dinner.

Chilled tomato juice, steaming bowls of soup, spicy relishes, delicate jellies, opulent puddings and festive mince meat, all stand ready on the pantry shelf to lighten the task of the modern meal planner. Such a meal as this, built around these holiday helpers, will be a delight to the hostess as well as the guests.

ROAST TURKEY

Singe and wash the singed and dressed turkey. Rub with salt and pepper, inside and out, and stuff, pressing the stuffing firmly into the fowl. Tie the legs down firmly to the body and place in a roasting pan. Grease well with unsalted fat or olive oil, dredge with flour and place in a hot oven (about 450 deg. F.) to sear the outside quickly and prevent the escape of the inner juices. After about 25 minutes lower the heat to a moderate oven (375 deg. F.); baste with water to which a small amount of butter and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce have been added. Cover the pan, if desired, and bake until the breast is tender. Baste several times during the baking and allow from 20 to 25 minutes per pound of turkey.

TURKEY STUFFING

Crumb 1 loaf slightly dry bread, and season with salt and pepper to suit the taste. Add ¼ cup melted butter, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 onion, very finely minced, and ½ teaspoon cinnamon, if desired. Mix thoroughly and press firmly into the turkey. This makes a rich crumbly stuffing, and is deliciously seasoned.

MINCE MEAT PIE

Line a piepan with pastry rolled to ⅛ inch thickness. Fill with mince meat, using a one-pound can of jar of mince meat for an average size pie. Moisten edge of crust with a few drops of water and cover with a top crust, which has been slit in several places to allow the escape of steam. Press edges firmly together and bake in a hot oven (450 deg. F.) for 15 minutes. Reduce temperature and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) until done, or until mince meat boils. A few drops of cream brushed over the top of the pie helps to make it brown nicely.

THE GIFT

A Complete Short Story Daily on This Page

By ALLEN KAYLOR

BROKE! Bill Blake's thoughts chorused the word—broke, broke, broke! as he trudged hungrily up Fifth ave. His pockets, his stomach, his heart were all empty, with special effects around the cardiac region.

Those two pretty girls who slanted [illegible] and glanced at the [illegible] knew with [illegible] they could [illegible]

Even [illegible] flutter [illegible] swell [illegible] him [illegible]

"The [illegible] in [illegible] want [illegible] —you [illegible] Dad!

Dad [illegible] sunlight [illegible] lowed [illegible] when [illegible] was [illegible]

"Any [illegible]" Bill asked. "For [illegible]"

Dad [illegible] "No [illegible] least, [illegible] they don't [illegible] level-headed [illegible] Two [illegible] and thinking [illegible]" Dear Dad, he was [illegible] "I'd rather trust [illegible] empty-headed youngster whose heart is set on having a joyride—who won't stick to the job more than a few months [illegible] who's had his full share of knocking around and wants to give his brains and loyalty and devotion to one job all the rest of his life."

Bill admitted bitterly that it was harder for Dad to be jobless than himself. Dad faced a tougher task of finding a spot—he met with crueler rebuffs, deeper disappointments. At 23, you simply had no age. At 51, you were Methuselah's big brother.

Bill turned again toward the door.

"Got your fare and lunch money, son?" Mom asked.

"Plenty of both," he grinned, clutching the emptiness in his pocket. "Right here. S'long." He went out, knowing that there was less than a dollar in the flat behind him.

Along the wide street, over the bridge and up Fifth avenue he trudged. A stray mutt trailed him for a while, giving him welcome company, until they lost each other in the traffic. Then Bill gave his idle attention to the shop windows. He eyed some gifts he'd have liked to give the folks on the anniversary—in particular, he stopped to covet an expensive pipe he might have given Dad if he hadn't hocked his watch last week.

The Cast of Characters in "The Gift"

BILL BLAKE, who leaves the family circle to hunt for a job.

BLAKE SR., his dad, who goes with more misgivings than out on the same mission, but his son.

He fingered a small golden football he'd won for an alleged act of gridiron heroism back in his high school days. Its pawnshop value was six bits, sentimentally, it was worth six million bucks. Whatever good fortune had ever come his way, the token had been with him. To part with it was to part with the last straw. And yet six bits might buy—

Suddenly, a hand smote him a ten-horsepower smack. Bill, the smackee, groaned and wheeled. His fist clenched tightly around the golden football, when his eyes recognized the grinning phiz of "Whale" McCorley, the bone-crushing pride of those faraway school days.

Suddenly, a hand smote him a ten-horsepower smack

"Whale! You ole hunk of grasshopper plague!"

"Bill! You menace to mice and maids!"

"All joking aside, Whale, I'm glad to see you!"

Bill spoke with intense sincerity, although they went right on exchanging terrific insults. Everything about Whale—all the two hundred and sixty-two pounds and five ounces of him—shouted success. Whale's old man, Bill recollected, owned that flock of haberdashery stores. The toy mountain had his huge carcass wrapped in an English-tailored rag; his tie was neoned with a three-carat blinder; that precious document he clutched with such tenderly loving care was a racing sheet.

Whale suggested a drink. Bill promptly accepted, figuring cannily that Whale in a mellow mood might be more in a brotherly mood. Over the second glass, he dropped the hint. He didn't tell Whale how badly he needed a job, nor that he wanted a job at all. That would never, never do. Past blunders had taught Bill that a friend with need became an ex-friend with speed to such as Whale McCorley.

"Y'know, pal," said Bill w. [illegible] the charm jets turned on, "I met poor Nelson this ayem."

"Poor Nelson?" Whale's [illegible] demeanor was pardonable. Nobody, he nor Bill had ever known the gentleman.

"Sure," lied Bill. "Nelly was one of the gang. Remember the time his car jumped the ferry and we had to swim the Hudson?"

Such a sweet memory was too rich not to be remembered so Whale, tossing laughter [illegible] remembered quite well.

Bill went on to tell how poor Nelly was out of a job and how he wished he could help out a grand guy like that, whose car jumped off ferries and things. Whale also wished he could help poor Nelly. So moved, he called the office and learned that they needed another salesman in the Fourth ave. store. Whale was astounded to learn that he owned a Fourth ave. store; he never visited the "outlets." Nevertheless, he wrote a few words about "the bearer" on a card and begged Bill to look up poor Nelly and give it to him. "But don't tell him about me, old timer; I don't want that guy camping around my door."

THE WINNER

"Sure; I know how it is," said Bill understandingly.

The store was a half hour's walk from the corner where they said s'long. Bill made it in ten minutes. He headed straight for the office up on the balcony and found the manager, a small, gray-haired fellow with a brisk, pleasant voice.

The manager fingered Whale's card reverently. "I'm stumped," he smiled. "I don't generally do the hiring. The main office takes care of that. In fact, they phoned that they were sending a man down for my approval."

Bill's jaw fell. He grabbed the golden football—symbol of fortune—and fingered it hopefully. "Does that let me out?"

"No, siree! Personally, I'd prefer an older man, but if Mr. McCorley picked you, you're the winner."

"You [illegible] swell!"

"You go on the payroll tomorrow. The work isn't killing; the pay's forty-five. Rather high for you, I'd judge. I'll give you any tips you need about handling the customers."

Bill grinned his joy. This was the break of breaks. That gift for the folks would be delayed, but, by the prancing picklefish, they'd get it!

"It's peculiar, though," the manager was saying. "This other man has the same name as yours, William Blake—senior."

Bill dropped the football on the desk. His grin vanished as the manager added: "He's due here now, by appointment."

On the wall behind the manager's head was a glass-covered picture. In a glow of the glass, Bill could see the front of the store downstairs, clear out to the sidewalk. And on the sidewalk, loitering nervously, he saw the figure of his rival for the job. His frozen stare made no mistake. It was Dad!

"Something the matter?" the manager asked. "Feeling right?"

"Me?" Bill's lips were dry. "Me? I'm okay. Only—only I'm thinking. I'm young, see. I'm not one of those old ginks who's been kicked around who wants to give all his brains and tune and loyalty to one job for the rest of his life. I want fun, see!" He could almost remember Dad's morning speech word for word. "I want this soft job just long enough to save some dough—three or four months maybe—and then I duck the harness and off I go. I'm not selling my life to some honky-tonk outfit for coffee and beans. I want a joyride, see!"

The manager's face reddened to his silver hair. His lips grew taut. "Your attitude is clear enough. I—I really must interview my other applicant before reaching any decision. And I'll have to speak to young Mr. McCorley about—"

Bill laughed hoarsely. "Don't bother! I've got other prospects." He stood up and grabbed his hat. "Good by, sir!"

THE BEST PRESENT

No time to waste now. In the picture pane he had seen his father enter the store and approach a salesman. Bill's toes beat a quick tattoo down the steps. He walked swiftly to the farthest aisle and found safely beside a rack of ties. The corner of his eye saw his dad move timidly up the center aisle and mount the balcony stairs. Quickly, Bill lit for the door.

There was rejoicing at home that night. Dad was proud and gay. He briefly related the story the manager told him—about the irresponsible youngster who'd thrown the job down. But mother didn't listen. She donned her prettiest dress and insisted that they join her around the tinkly, ancient piano.

"It's our anniversary party," she laughed. "The happiest party, too, that I've ever had—since my wedding."

Bill smiled. "This time you needn't worry about duplicate presents, nor white elephants. Lady, there ain't none."

She beamed at his father. "Haven't we the very best present of all, my dear?" Then she began to play.

Bill and his father stood behind her, ready to blend their voices. And as the opening notes rose, dad clasped Bill's hand. "Thanks, son," he whispered, with intense gratitude, "for the gift."

Bill was puzzled. He looked down at something his father had left in his palm. It was the golden football. Suddenly he knew he had left it on the store manager's desk. Dad had found it.

"Come on, boys," his mother called. "This one is special. Give out with 'He's a Jolly Good Fellow!'"

Bill grasped the token more tightly, more happily. He matched his father's proud grin. And then they sang

Business Index Tops All Records

The index of business activity has smashed all records for three years back . . . Small though it is, the latest gain is the tenth successive weekly increase . . . One carrying the figure to 102.4, just a shade under the 1937 peak . . .

COMPONENTS . . . Most responsible for the good showing are old standbys . . . Such as automobile production . . . commercial loans . . . cotton forwardings . . . steel ingot output . . . Lower were bank debits outside New York City and carloadings . . . The heavy black graph line tells a wordless story . . . But it is one whose impressiveness is readily understood though comparison . . . For consistency nothing the past three years equals it . . . Best similar performance was in 1938 . . . During the fall rise . . . Whose steepness hardly compares with the present . . . And while the end of the rise is logically in sight, as the year runs out, a snarp dip need not be expected . . . Simply because the auto output component has been moving ahead without Chrysler . . . Now and from this important producer will cushion any year-end dip.

An additional feature of interest in the Paine Webber Review is an analysis of General Telephone . . . The largest system outside the Bell group . . . STOCK PRICES . . . Continue to struggle between a desire to work higher and fear of the future . . . Lately one session after another has witnessed a wavering rise on domestic business news . . . invariably followed by chilblains brought on by tax scares, war reports or some such external "news" which is more fancy than fact . . . Then too some of the chartists are influencing trading and speculative ideas . . . By expressing the opinion prices must retreat further before running higher . . . Which seems beside the point since their ultimate price ideas embrace much higher levels . . .

EDUCATION . . . As well as social activity is the keynote of the Shawmut Bank Club program . . . This week members were treated to an explanation of an entirely new method of computing figures . . . A noted professor of mathematics showed those attending a lecture held in the main office of the bank how calculations that take months could be done while they watched . . . Whether or not the rapid system will replace present-day machinery is a moot question . . . But the interested group of bankers were much impressed with its practical aspects.

NOTEBOOK . . . Merritt, Chapman & Scott's sales are placed about $1,000,000 ahead of last year . . . Backlog of unfinished business amounts to around $7,000,000 . . . Prospects for 1940 are understood to be the best in years . . . Accumulations on the preferred stock of roughly $37 per share prevent consideration of the junior equity . . . U. S. Industrial Alcohol may earn $1.20 a share for 1939 . . . Company is currently reported working at capacity . . . With South American export business picking up fast . . . Since alcohol is used as a solvent in smokeless gunpowder the company ought to do well in the event the Allies buy any great quantity of the item here . . .

Andrews Gets Job

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (AP)—Elmer Andrews, former federal wage-hour administrator, will go to work next, Monday for Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., on a research survey.

Motors, Steels Lead Slow Market Rally

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (AP)—Motors and steels led a lagging rally in the stock market today and some leaders added fractions to around 2 points at their best.

There wasn't much steam to the session from the quiet opening on.

In the black were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe, New York Central, General Electric, U. S. Rubber, Kennecott and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Aircrafts were inclined to lag.

Settlement of the Chrysler Corp. labor dispute was considered constructive by many traders, but few were willing to rush into positions. What buying there was seemed to be on a selective basis. Offerings were at no time heavy.

At London prices remained steady but at Amsterdam, after a good showing in the morning, irregularity developed. Commodities were mixed. Bonds tended higher, with U. S. Treasury issues in the lead.

Iron Age reported there was a leveling off in new steel business which may be accentuated by the fact shipments of some products can be deferred until after Jan. 1 without loss, as one of the largest producers has reaffirmed most prices for the first quarter.

"Nevertheless," it adds, "there is still a substantial flow of new business, mainly for the first quarter, and, while steel inventories are being built up in many instances to requirements of at least three months, the volume of steel that is going directly into consumption is greater than seems to be generally realized."

Electric power production for the week ended Nov. 25 dipped a little from the preceding week but was still 13.6 per cent higher than for the 1938 comparative.

Percentage gains over a year ago were highest in the New England, central industrial and southern regions.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (INS)—Noon stock exchange prices: Chrysler 86¾ up 1½, General Motors 54¼ up ½, U. S. Steel 68 up ½, Bethlehem Steel 82½ up 1, Allied Chemical 172½ up ⅝, Westinghouse Electric 112½ unchanged, Anaconda Copper 31¾ up ⅜, du-Pont 177⅛ off ⅜, Douglas 76 up ¾, Sears Roebuck 81 off ⅛, U. S. A Word for Football's 'Unprivileged Third'

FOOTBALL IS SOMETHING MORE THAN howling horseshoes of humanity, strutting bands, luscious ladies and ragdolling cheer leaders. For football too, has its "underprivileged third"—the sandlot kids in denim dungarees and padless pants who play on pebbly backlots and risk blood and bones in scrimmages like fishpier riots.

By AUSTEN LAKE

It's a major problem at Boston's City Hospital each Sunday. The kids, maimed by hurts that range from ruptured viscera and multiple fractures to gouges, sprains and contusions, come in droves—a weekly average of 40. Most of these casualties are painted, taped, injected with anti-tetanus and discharged. But many remain with legs elevated in plaster splints and arms dangling from pulleys.

So today Dr. Otto Herman, tall and gravely gray humanitarian who runs the hospital's Bone and Joint Service (Come up and see him sometime!) clucked his tongue. Dr. Joe Burnett, tawny-haired medical supervisor of school football, clucked his tongue. The white-coated internes and starchy ward sisters clucked their tongues too. It is high time, they thought, that Prevention take the place of Cure.

* * *

The Price Is Heavy

THIS AUTUMN THERE HAVE BEEN 39 CASES of cobblestone kids hurt in neighborhood football, seriously enough to be hospitalized—lads between 9 and 21 who rode through the accident gate with ambulance sirens growling. One had his spleen ruptured. Four had compound fractures of BOTH legs and two had broken both forearms. The rest of the list varied between fractures of wrist, arm, kneecaps, ankles and elbows—a clinical curiosity shop. Two had first degree concussions. There were 20 fracture cases in all.

Normally the sport pages don't carry such stories—perhaps a 4-line "reader" if the k'd dies and a head, "Football Claims Boy Victim." Sport pages are for the greater glamour of big college craters. Headlines are for the varsity heroes. For these are just fuzzy-haired tykes in blue denim, lads with a yen for play but no money to buy specialized protection like coal scuttle helmets, leather shoulder sheathing or moulded knee cups.

So Boston's autumnal toll of sandlot injuries, including those treated privately or in other institutions than the C. H. must run to 1000. The City Hospital handles 400 alone.

* * *

"Multiple Backward Lateral"

A TYPICAL CASE HAPPENED SUNDAY when a lad of Italian extraction in his early teens was hustled in with what Dr. Herman recognized as a "multiple backward lateral and dislocation of the foot." The boy's lower leg was swollen to the size and color of a smoked ham and between waves of agony he said he had stumbled—just stumbled!—over a backlot pitcher's mound while trying for a tackle. So they dropped an ether cone over his nose and with a surgeon's scalpel tried to save him from a life-long limp.

Recently another boy came on foot—doubled with nausea. He thought, maybe had a couple of cracked ribs and asked, please, to be taped with adhesive strips. But instead they took out a ruptured spleen and for days his candle of Life flickered and guttered feebly before resuming its steady flame.

Nor is this peculiar to Boston sandlots. It's true the Nation over. Perhaps fifty thousand kids splinter portions of their skeletons each fall. An average of 30 die each year—lads without medical supervision at their games, boys with no money for pads and plates, tiny tykes crumbled in collisions with adolescent burlies.

What to do?—for its the inherent right of every American boy to play, one of the finest traditions of this Free Land! They'll play and they'll continue to get hurt. The character of football is such that injury cannot be eliminated entirely. But a partial answer is better supervision of their games, certificates of physical fitness from neighborhood doctors, police prevention of overmatching slender shavers with bulky adults. The Park Department does it in League games!

* * *

BETTER SUPERVISION

WHAT HAPPENS ON THE SANDLOTS? A boy twists a leg ligament and with that spartan quality of boyhood continues to play on his gimpy leg. Later, lacking the agility to protect himself, he incurs a fracture. As Dr. Burnett says, "It's always the second injury that maims." Or a lad, unknown to himself, lacks the proper calcium, nitrate and phosphate content in the bones that are abnormally brittle. Or he has a fluttery heart. Or a kid, having received a leg fracture, has the member pulled and tugged by well-meaning mates in the mistaken assumption that it is a mere cramp, dislocation or sprain.

Youth is a precious civic asset,

SCHOOLBOY CONTESTS APPEAL TO 300,000 FANS

If Robert L. Ripley were in town, he could probably draw you an interesting comparison by laying end to end the 300,000 fans who'll attend the schoolboy grid games on Thanksgiving Day to stretch from here to Chicago.

DEAD BIRD. Captain Joe King, English High end, is determined that Public Latin turkey will be his tomorrow. Game will feature doubleheader at Hive. It will be the 52nd English-Latin meeting.

Boston Evening American Photo

By SAM BROGNA

Boston English and Public Latin, the oldest high and public schools in the country, meet in the 52nd annual Turkey Day doubleheader at National League Field tomorrow.

In the other half of the twin bill that is expected to be witnessed by at least 20,000 schoolboy fans and alumni, the High School of Commerce stacks up against Dorchester High starting at 11 o'clock. This game will be played after the English game.

The series between English and Latin began way back in 1889 although the records don't reveal the winner the first year. Since then, they have played every year regardless of what turned up in their path. The double blue holds the advantage with 22 wins against Latin's 19 The other 10 contests wound up in ties.

ENGLISH WON LAST YEAR

English won last year's battle 6 to 0, its first since 1935. The game before that ended in a scoreless tie with the '36 meeting taken by the Purple by the score of 13 to 0.

Coach Bill Ohrenberger's eleven, undefeated in city competition during the past two seasons, should

But owing to the lack of mathematics and the fact that statistics are sometimes deceiving, you'll have to draw your own imaginative picture of the crowds.

Schoolboy fans who haven't seen a contest the entire fall have made reservations to watch their alma mater's clash with traditional rivals. Steady followers have had their tickets tucked away for weeks for seats on the 50-yard line.

Then, there are always those groups who figure that there's nothing better to eat than a spicy turkey and there's no better way to work up an appetite than to sit in the fresh air all morning. They'll be out to cheer if for nothing else than to make sure that they can have their afternoon fill.

And if its spice they'll be looking for in the famed proverbial meal, it's spice they'll be offered in the scholastic football programs. They can rest assured of this or else go home feeling that 299,999 other people have been wrong for years.

There'll be every type of a tilt and on practically every gridiron in the state. You'll have a Bowl contender moseying into Waltham as Brockton attempts to wind up an undefeated schedule. You'll have the newest chapter of the ivy-clad Boston English-Public Latin series at the Bee Hive.

And if you're still not satisfied, you can take in a swell doubleheader with tradition and some real grid technique rolled into one at that same Hive.

As a matter of fact, there'll be so much activity that it's pretty hard to pick out the best game to attend.

At least, you won't be alone.

Brockton and Waltham Top Slate

By MICHAEL GILLOOLY

With a state championship virtually assured, the Brockton high school eleven will be looking forward to greater things when the squad invades Athletic Field tomorrow morning for its annual Thanksgiving Day struggle with Waltham.

The Shoe City club will undoubtedly be concentrating on defeating Waltham—which shouldn't be much of a task—with high hopes of being offered a trip to the new Starlet Bowl in Florida.

Inquiries have been made by the Bowl committee into the Brockton record and to anyone who is familiar with the Shoe City outfit knows that they couldn't help but be pleased with the showing. Although no bid has been made, a victory over this traditional foe would be a grand stepping stone.

Coach Charlie Holden's boys will be seeking their 19th straight victory, including their 10th this season with only a Medford deadlock marring an otherwise perfect slate. The Brockton manpower and versatility relieves all tension of the outcome with only the total score to be tabulated.

WALTHAM IN AND OUTERS

Bernie Lanoue, John Tamulevicz, Billy Gold, Art Kashgagian, in the backfield, and Jim Dodero's outstanding line-play make Brockton a huge favorite.

Waltham has had an in-and-out schedule and unless Coach Jim Leary's boys play far over their heads, they will undoubtedly drop another decision.

Everett's futile chase toward state honors will probably reach top peak against Chelsea, but a pennant will not be related because of its lone loss to Manchester Central earlier in the season. Coach Dennis Gildea has moulded another fine eleven but this one let-up has spoiled its championship hopes.

Another most interesting encounter will get under way at Arlington when Melrose invades the Fred Ostergren camp for the usual meeting which started back in the days of 1912. Both clubs have come along well in the late stages and should wage a close battle from all angles.

Watertown's eleven will probably not be a very pleasing host to the invading Belmont club. Coach Dan Sullivan has done a fine job with his Watertown squad so that this decision should be handed to the home club.

Those fans who like to see the under-dog stage a desperate battle are invited free of charge to the Quincy-North Quincy contest at the Municipal Stadium. The North boys will be outweighed 12 pounds to the player but you can bet your shirt that they won't lay down until the final whistle.

It's for the championship of the Granite City and when Coach Jack Donohue warns that his North eleven is a fighting outfit, as take Bill Jennings for example, you can rest assured of a close score.

CHAPMAN UNDER KNIFE

Casey, Numa Mat Rivals At Arena

Steve (Crusher) Casey, one time Irish fisherman, who gave it up to win the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, appears on a Boston mat for the second time this season when he defends his crown against Leo Numa, former Black Secret, in the main event of Promoter Paul Bowser's tournament tonight at the Boston Arena.

Numa was a hot favorite here when he was grappling his way to the top as the Secret. He finally won the right to meet Ed Don George for the world's title, and it was only his lack of experience that kept him from the crown.

Following his defeat by George, he drifted west and since then has met and beaten the best of them.

John Joyce

Chelsea Grid Star Lost to Eleven

Chelsea high school lost one of its first call reserve yesterday afternoon when John Joyce fractured his right ankle in a scrimmage at the Memorial stadium where the Red Devils were working out for their annual tussle with Everett.

Joyce, a halfback, will be definitely on the sidelines with this injury.

MEDFORD STANDS OKAYED FOR TEST

Telephone wires smouldered through the districts as insurance companies, in a hesitant mood, almost removed Medford's slight favoritism over its traditional rival, Malden, in their Turkey Day Battle—that favoritism the advantage of playing on its own Fulton st grounds.

After much discussion, the site was finally approved for the elevens to continue their long home and home series started back in 1889.

There was some doubt that the Fulton st. stands could stand the weight of the 15,000 capacity crowd expected to witness the Medford attempt to wind up its season without a defeat.

The situation became so serious when local companies failed to issue the liability insurance that the removal of the game to the Malden stadium was to bring about a special meeting of the school committee.

MEDFORD TIED BROCKTON

But now that this obstacle has been removed and the point that the stands are in good condition proven, Coach Tom O'Connor's hopes return to their top peak. The Mystics have been tied twice, Everett and Brockton, but still rate tops with many fans among the school elevens.

Coach Warren McGuirk's boys have not been up to their usual par this season but should prove dangerous to any team in any game. With the long tradition to uphold, this Malden club is going to be especially hard to down and will be an even money bet to come through with the decision.

SOMERVILLE AT RINDGE

Meanwhile, Rindge Tech and Somerville will renew one of the oldest school series at Russell Field. This series had its start in 1893 and this tilt promises to be as exciting as most of its predecessors.

Coach Harry Downes' Brookline squad will take on Newton in a set that found the teams meeting for the first time back in 1894. Brookline, with cut a single setback and a lone tie upsetting its record, will be favored to take the bunting.

Newton has shown up well for its first season under its new mentor, Gwen MacDowell, and with anything liable to happen, holds a promising chance of turning the tables on its ancient foe.

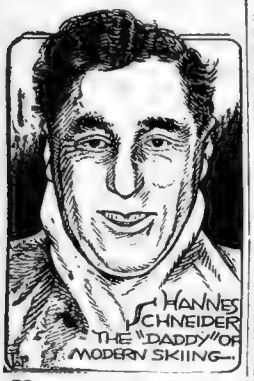
Ski Scribblings

BY "TAP" GOODENOUGH

WINGED BOARDS OVER BOSTON! A soaring squadron of skiers will fly from the rafters; downhill runners will schuss and swerve through swirling snow; flashing blades will blend into colored ice, as skaters go their streamlined way, opening the Fifth Annual National Winter Sports Exposition and Ski Tournament at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. SKI HEIL!



This year the show will be augmented by a complete Ice Follies of 1940, featuring the greatest skating stars on this continent.

Heading the skiing delegation will be Hannes Schneider, the world's best-known teacher and authority on the sport. As everyone knows, Herr Schneider was brought to North Conway last winter, where he now resides as leader of the Eastern Slopes Ski School.

This writer had the privilege of greeting this great skier on his arrival last year, so a thumbnail sketch of his colorful career may prove interesting: It was in 1907 when Hannes Schneider first started to impart ski instruction at St. Anton-am-Arlberg in the Austrian Tyrol. From this location is derived the term used for Schneider's style known as the "ARLBERG TECHNIQUE." Having few pupils, the Skimeister had plenty of free time to experiment on long mountain tours as to his skiing ability.

Hannes Schneider Discoverer Of Famous 'Arlberg-Crouch'

Because of his over-bold running, heavy falls often resulted. He soon discovered that he was standing in too stiff and upright a position, and began to bend his knees and lower the center of gravity. From this came the famous "ARLBERG CROUCH."

Schneider next developed the turn called the stem christiania, and partially abandoned the telemark except in deep powder snow.

Using this new technique in competition for the first time, Herr Hannes won many important slalom races. He was four times runner-up in the Swiss (combined) championships, missing the title on one occasion by one-thousandth of a point.

Schneider's school soon became world-renowned. During the World War, he conducted military ski courses, teaching hundreds of soldiers how to control their boards.

After the war, this pioneer filmed "The Wonders of Skiing" and "The Ski Chase." These two motion pictures did a lot to further the sport, and introduced to masses of skiers a new style featuring, notably, "Vorlage," running with the knees bent and weight forward.

Schneider's books were also read by thousands. Truly, this man has done more for skiing than any other individual in the world. He can well be called the "daddy of modern ski technique."

Greater Boston Skiers Flock To Slopes of Mt. Washington

Black from Somerville . . . Ray Howlett, president of the Oshoni Ski Club of Boston, climbed Mt. Cardigan last Sunday for the exercise . . . Norman Barnes of Russell's in North Conway and president of the Eastern Slopes Ski Club, is working most vigorously for the region . . .

B. JARNE JOHANSEN, who has had a ski shop on Friend st., Boston, for years, is an expert skier in his own right and does a lot to boost the sport . . . As far as we know now, OSCAR CYR, certified instructor who ran the Newfound Region Ski School last year, is free lancing this season and is open for offers . . . experience little difficulty in making it two in a row. They have by far a much better balanced aggregation with a strong forward wall as well as six all around backs.

Only three boys who started last year's game will be in English's starting lineup. They are Capt. Joe King, Burton Oranburg and Frank Holland.

Tom Brennan, the Charlestown transferee and leading scorer of his team with four touchdowns, will start at fullback. Emil Shotgren, a small but elusive ball carrier, will be calling the plays, with Joe Sullivan and Phil Lombardi in the halfback berths.

Coach Charlie Fitzgerald's eleven, sporting one of their worst records in years, with only one win against two defeats and a double tie, hasn't much to offer. His starting lineup will have four players who started against the Blue last year, but they can't match their opponents.

Havey and Bunny Rowen, co-captains, and Ward and Beyer are the quartet. Rowen, who has seen service as a center this year, will be at the signal calling berth, with Beyer, McCarthy and Gorenstein rounding out the backfield. Havey and Ward play side by side, with the former at left end. Ward is also the heaviest man on the team, tipping the scales at 197 pounds.

CASEY IN LINE

The other starting linemen are Casey, Smith, Killion, Redgate and Nevins, reading from right end to left guard.

In the other engagement, a powerful, smooth working Commerce eleven, will be favored over a Dorchester team that has been hit hard by the injury jinx through the season.

The record between the two now has the Red and Black out front with nine wins to seven for "Doc" Fleming's boys with two ties thrown in.

In Ed Winston, "Doc" Fleming will present one of the best quarterbacks seen at the hive this year. He is not only noted for his consistent 50-yard booting but for his passing and running also. And with Joe Egan, Ike Sullivan and Val Balchunas, it shapes to be one of the smoothest backfields in the Hub.

a community responsibility. The uptown kids, with cash-flush papas to provide equipment and coaching control, can take care of themselves. But the downtown kids, below the pinch of poverty's belt, must be sheltered by the city's wing—with better and more play supervision. Even such simple devices as posting pages of fundamental advice at all sport places—plain Don'ts and simple Dos. Or sending competent football adults to lecture the lads in such centers and the Burroughs' Newsboy's foundation, the Dennison House, the various parochial clubs and neighborhood missions.

It won't keep all the kids from getting hurt any more than one can keep boys from falling out of apple trees. But it may save a few lives and might reduce the sordid Sunday clinics at the City Hospital.

I SAT IN with "Tack" Hardwick, Joe Dugan and Tris Speaker as they launched indoor baseball at the Garden. Even the fact Boston lost two games to Brooklyn didn't take away any of the enthusiasm these men have for the game that has been very successful in the West and on the Coast.

"Indoor baseball is a fast, exciting game, and with a good team it will go over in Boston," said Hardwick. "We would like to have as many New England players as possible on our club, but if we cannot get the kind of players we desire in this section of the country we shall secure them from other places."

The crowd liked the excitement and speed of the game. The umpires came in for a riding on close decisions. As usual, the fans were for the home club, and wished to see it get as many breaks as possible.

Walter Brown of the Garden is gambling with the backers of the Boston team. Brown is so certain that indoor baseball will succeed that he has agreed to accept a percentage of the gate as rental rather than a guarantee. This arrangement may prove a profitable one for the Garden.

Sheldon Fairbanks, Joe Conway, Attorney General Paul Dever, Mayor Maurice J. Tobin, Fire Commissioner Reilly, and numerous other notables sat in at the opening. It was the general opinion that indoor baseball has an appeal.

Hardwick told the ushers not to try to get any balls hit into the stands.

"I would like as many persons as possible to have an indoor baseball as a souvenir of our opening," said Hardwick.

During the course of the evening a couple of dozen balls were whacked into sections occupied by cash customers. Some of the boys and girls made such fine catches that they rate consideration from Joe Dugan who is manager of the Boston club.

All-America Boxing Hits New High

THE INDOOR baseball games at the Garden were over in time to enable me to drop in at the Arena for the finals of the American-Record All-America bouts. The Monday night show set a new high in the matter of attendance as well as in receipts. The boxers then gave the big crowd the most stirring evening of amateur boxing witnessed in Boston this season.

There will be another set of tryout bouts at the Arena on next Monday night. This will be the final tournament before the New England championships which will be staged at the Garden on December 11.

The bouts on Monday night convinced me that this year's crop of amateur boxers is the best in several years. The New England team that competes against New York, Albany and Baltimore in the Eastern finals at the Garden on December 18 should be the finest to ever represent this section of the country.

Four-Mile Race at Tanforan

THERE WILL be a four-mile race at Tanforan on December 16. This type of race has become popular on the Coast. Malicious will be among the thoroughbreds who will compete. In a recent four-mile race at Bay Meadows, Malicious ran fourth to Annihilation. The latter scored a surprise victory.

New England has never had a four-mile race, but it is possible one may be arranged by one of the local tracks for next season. Panalong proved the best of the distance horses at the recent Narragansett Park meeting.

Maryland has always featured distance races. I think the betting public gets more of a thrill out of such contests than it does watching six furlongs events which are over so quickly that the spectators have little chance to admire the running of the thoroughbreds or the ability of the jockeys.

Bruins Smear Toronto With Mr. Shore Missing

By BILL GRIMES

Although they frankly admit that Eddie Shore is in a class by himself as a hockey player, the Bruins have never cottoned to the scribes and the fans crediting him with the lion share of their victories.

So, last night, while the Edmunton Express was up in Springfield master-minding his Indians to a 4 to 2 win over the Philadelphia Ramblers, the Bruins ganged up on the Toronto Maple Leafs and came up with a 6 to 2 victory.

Eddie Shore had played in the previous home games. He figured prominently in the Bruins' 3 to 1 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks and then, after the Bruins had dropped a decision to Les Canadiens he sparked them to a two-all draw with Rangers on Sunday night.

Therefore the Bruins didn't have an opportunity to show their public that, even with Eddie Shore out of the lineup, they are still just about the best hockey club in the game until last night.

Herb Cain started the Rossman on the way to victory by scoring in the first and second periods. Then, the Bruins really opened up and tallied no less than four times in the final canto.

CAIN SCORES TWO GOALS

After Cain had chalked up two goals, with the assistance of Art Jackson, "Flash" Hollett, Gordie Pettinger and Jack Portland, the Bruins went to work on Walter "Turk" Broda.

In the second minute of the final chapter, Bill Cowley pulled Broda out of position and then passed to Roy Conacher who counted and two minutes later, "Flash" Hollett fed Herbie Schmidt a scoring pass. Bobby Bauer picked up his own rebound, a back hand shot from the left wing and scored and Gordie Pettinger and Art Jackson teamed up for the sixth and final Boston marker.

Murph Chamberlain accounted for both Toronto goals. He put the Maple Leafs in the ball game with a goal early in the second period when he took a pass from "Red" Horner and tallied again in the third period, unassisted.

QUESTION GOAL

Chamberlain's first goal should have been recalled. Horner carried the puck in on Frankie Brimsek and both he and Chamberlain were in the crease when the latter snapped the disc into the net.

From the opening face off, it was very apparent that the Bruins were out to prove that they can win hockey games even without Eddie Shore. They didn't hold back and wait for the Edmunton Express to make the plays.

They tore right into the Leafs and as the visitors were playing the same type of hockey, the game was wide open and unusually fast and furious.

CLAPPER INSISTS

Capt. Dit Clapper raced down the ice and barged up to Ion demanding that the goal be allowed and it required a thorough explanation on the part of the official before the Bruin leader was satisfied.

Then, when Murph Chamberlain scored the goal which tied up the game in the second period, while he and Horner were both in the crease, the Bruins in general and Frankie Brimsek in particular, challenged Ion's decision. But again, Mickie stood his ground.

Battery B Meets First Corps "11"

A football tradition of 35 years will be broken Thanksgiving morning when the First Corps Cadets meet Battery B instead of archrival Battery A of Commonwealth armory at Tech field at 10 o'clock.

This annual contest started in the Harvard Stadium and through the years became one of the important Turkey Day appetizers.

It still remains the leading local engagement of the arms of the service, with the infantry meeting the artillery as in years past.

JOE GARDELLA DAVE GLUECK

PALS, Dave Glueck, Boston Evening American football writer, congratulates Joe Gardella on his election to Harvard football captaincy. Dave and Joe were team-mates at Harvard

GARDELLA ATTAINS BOYHOOD OBJECTIVE

By DAVE GLUECK

Five years ago "Jiffy" Joe Gardella, Harvard's new football captain, was playing halfback in his last year at Arlington High. One of his best friends was Bill Collins, first string guard on the Holy Cross eleven.

When Joe confided to Bill that he had his heart set on going to Harvard, the other boy laughed, and tried to dissuade him.

Harvard, said he, was a rich boy's college, where one learned the broad A. It was certainly no place for a boy to waste his football ability. Joe listened to this attentively, but it failed to alter his determination. He went from high school to Worcester Academy where he continued his grid career with Tom Healey, tackle standout on this year's Crimson team.

All this time Joe had never lost sight of his ultimate goal, Harvard, and after that Harvard Medical School. When a knee injury forced him to lose study time and undergo an operation, he still persevered, and though he was graduated from the Academy that year, he decided to take a postgrad course and make sure of passing his college boards.

JOE HARD WORKER

That last year in preparatory school Joe worked really hard. It was too soon after his operation to play football, and he confined his exercise to track and diving on the swimming team. The following summer he received a notice from Harvard that began "I am very pleased to inform you etc." Joe didn't have to read any further, he had imagined the rest often enough.

In September he was reporting for freshman football. That turned out to be Skip Stahley's poorest season, and Joe didn't have much blocking help on the runs he did make. Only Don Lowry and Joe moved up to the varsity squad in their sophomore years, and Joe soon won a starting fullback berth.

He still wasn't too dazzling, because that line took at least a quarter to find out where the opposition was playing and where their blocking assignments could be carried out.

STRONG ON DEFENSE

By that time Joe was usually pulled out of the game and his substitute would come in to run through the holes that had just started to open up.

But even last year his defensive ability was appreciated, and there were those in the know who claimed one Gardella was worth any 10 other backs.

Gardella in Infirmary

Joe Gardella, Harvard's newly-elected football captain, entered Stillman Infirmary, the university hospital today, for treatment of a leg infection.

Doctors said the ailment was not dangerous, but was one requiring preventative attention.

The infection developed from a skin abrasion in the Yale game.

BEST BET—BIRDLEA IN 7TH RACE

BOWIE RACE TRACK, Nov 29—A galloping winner the last time out over the mile and three-sixteenths route, Birdlea will be asked to negotiate more yardage in the nightcap final here this afternoon.

The daughter of Blue Larkspur won in such a hollow fashion from Candle Ends and Brandon Prince in her last start that it seems very probable that she can travel the longer distance today.

Birdlea Tops Says Clocker

By THE CLOCKER

An easy winner the last time out at Bowie over Candle Ends and Brandon Prince, C. S. Bromley's Birdlea has all the earmarks of a two straight winner as entered in the seventh stanza at Maryland today.

The speedy daughter of Blue Larkspur is bred to run all day and also has the necessary speed to escape interference in the early running.

BERTH ON ALL-EAST ELEVEN HIGH SCORING VITO'S GOAL

By DAVE GLUECK

If Vito Ananis, Boston College star halfback, scores 14 points against Holy Cross in the Fenway Saturday it will be the first time in football history that a major college player has been the nation's top tally man.

Vito's total to date is 73 points, just 14 less than the present champion, Sam Hammerstrom of Union College (New York). In between comes a gentleman from Clarion Teachers, Pa. and close on Vito's heels are the hopefuls of West Liberty W. Va., St. Anselms, Rensselaer, and Slippery Rock.

It is obvious from this that the soaring, scoring Eagle is the only big timer near the top of the heap.

Against Auburn, Temple, Detroit, and Kansas State the stocky halfback made seven T. Ds, as he calls them, for 42 points.

FASTEST MAN ON TEAM

Against St. Josephs St. Anselms Lebanon Valley and B. U. the easier half of the schedule, he registered the remaining 31, thus no one can claim that his fat record is based on a few good days against weak opposition.

Half the T. Ds came on the end of runs, and half by pass receptions. Vito is the fastest man on the Leahy squad, and when you get 185 pounds moving at almost 30 miles per hour, stopping it is quite a problem.

When he was in his first year at Worcester Academy, a long time ago as he himself admits, Exeter came down for a friendly afternoon with the pigskin.

MOVED TO RIGHT HALF

Before the game ended, Worcester had about 20 points to Exeter's none, but they had almost 20 players reclining along the side stripes in various stages of debilitation.

Vito was playing left halfback then, and doing the passing as well as all the running. Leahy moved him to right halfback, where he got much more chance as a pass receiver, "O'Rourke to Ananis" has been a profitable result for the Eagles this fall.

Incidentally, Vito says that although most of the tosses Charlie throws are too good to miss, the frail looking youngster puts terrific power in his heaves, and the ball often lands with enough force to bruise receivers chests and arms.

Vito says he never learned to block before he moved to the right half. Now when the boys are in right formation he works on opposing tackles and secondaries with the same efficiency that marks his ball carrying from left formation.

Leahy credited the Eagle high scorer with being his best defensive back. Against St. Anselms, he played only eight minutes, but this was time enough to score, and make what his coach called "the hardest tackle I've ever seen." The victim was Ray McLean, no soft shot for anyone in the open field. In preseason practice some one asked the Heights mentor to name his best boy. Frank demurred for a while, but finally admitted that Ananis won the title simply because he worked harder than anyone else.

ANANIS ENJOYS GAME

There is an unusually fine relationship between the sad eyed mentor and his star. Ananis declares that he has never enjoyed football as much as this year. Last season he was Doble's high scorer, but he claims to like the Notre Dame system much better.

At present, Vito is set on becoming a dentist, and would like to get a coaching job in some university where he could also learn the ungentle art. If this doesn't work out, he will play pro football until he has enough money to finish his education. Meanwhile, his heart is set on playing in the East-West game on New Year's day.

He has never been to the coast, and is anxious to find out about California football and sunshine. It does seem from the records, that Coach Kerr could make worst choices.

Farmer Quits Post at Yale

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 29 (AP)—President Charles Seymour announced today the resignation of Malcolm Farmer as director of athletics at Yale University to become executive vice-president of the Phoenix Bridge & Iron Co., Phoenixville, Pa. The resignation will become effective Jan. 1, 1940.

Dr. Seymour said Farmer's duties for the balance of the academic year would be assumed by Prof. Clarence W. Mendell, former dean of Yale College and former faculty chairman of the university's board of athletic control.

Farmer has been athletic director since 1932.

M'Laughry Names Team For Tilt With Rutgers

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 29 (AP)—Brown went through its last strenuous football drill of the season, a dummy scrimmage session, as preparations for the Rutgers engagement here tomorrow were all but completed.

Generally there was a marked improvement in play over the lackadaisical variety on display recently.

Main stress in the scrimmage was placed on the Bruins' own offense. For the most part the plays went smoothly as individual assignments, principally on blocking, were carried out efficiently. Some time, too, was spent on defensive measures against Rutgers plays.

A forward passing and a kicking drill also were incorporated in the workout. At the wind-up of the afternoon session all was serene in the Bruin camp except for a bit of concern expressed over the situation at the wings created by a succession of minor injuries.
